$60,000 FIRE IN WORCESTER

BOSTON ELOPERS LEAVE MEXICO FOR TEXAS

4 FLEE TO STREET AT ELM HILL BLAZE

Home of George C. Morton in Roxbury District Badly Burned by Flames

Four persons were driven hurriedly from their beds and one fireman was overcome by smoke in a fire in the two and one-half story frame dwelling of George C. Morton at No. 12 Brookledge street, in the Elm Hill section of Roxbury, early today.

Members of the family estimated the damage at between $20,000 and $25,000, most of it due to smoke.

George C. Morton, owner of the house, and member of the Carnenter-Morton Company of Sudbury street, and Mrs. Morton, left last night for Florida.

The fire started in the basement and was discovered by Emma Olsen, the cook. She awakened Eugene C. Morton, Miss Margery Morton and May Vayim, a maid.

The flames crept upward through the partitions and burned through the roof. A bell alarm was sounded, besides a telephone call for assistance.

Hoseman Arthur Nixon of Engine 42 succumbed to smoke while working on the second floor. He was carried downstairs by companions, and recovered some time later, when he was sent to his home.

Mr. Morton, Jr., and his sister went to the home of a relative next door, and later this morning sent a telegram informing their parents of what had happened.

The origin of the fire is undetermined.

SNOW OR RAIN DUE HERE FOR SUNDAY

It's going to be another of those unpleasant Sundays. Forecaster Smith's ultimatum was as follows: "Snow or rain tonight and Sunday, clearing Sunday night. Increasing east to southerly winds." He predicted a steady rise in temperature toward night, possibly to 35 or above. The unpleasantness will probably begin with snow and end in rain. The coldest spot in New England today was Greenville, Me., 2 degrees below zero. The warmest spot of New England was Rock Island, where it was 32 above. White River, Ont., reported the coldest weather of the Winter.

He was instructed to file the petition for the company at a meeting of the stockholders.

CARMEN FIGHT REDUCTION IN WAGES

Trolley Workers Say Pay Cut Will Have Little Effect in Lowering Cost to Public

Union carmen employed by the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway Company will fight the 20 per cent. wage reduction announced by the public trustees of the road, it was declared today.

They declared that the proposed cut, to take effect May 2, will have but little effect in lowering fares as promised by the officials, and questioned the statement that the cost of living has been reduced 20 per cent.

The announcement of the curtailment in wages, which will bring the employees' salaries back to the scale they received prior to the arbitration award of last September, was made

26 BLACK AND TANS REPORTED KILLED

Dublin Hears Policemen Died in Violent Fighting in County Cork

Dublin, Feb. 26.—An unconfirmed report was current here today that twenty-six Black and Tan policemen were killed in the violent fighting in County Cork yesterday. Dublin Castle has not yet issued an official statement on casualties.

Late advices from the field of battle reveal that two engagements were fought and that a large detachment of crown forces had a narrow escape from capture, due to the superior knowledge of the district by the Sinn Feiners.

The second action developed while reinforcements of soldiers and police were being rushed up to the vicinity of Bally-Vourney where the first engagement occurred.

SOLDIERS' BONUS FAVORABLY REPORTED

Washington, Feb. 26.—The Senate Finance Committee today reported favorably the soldiers' bonus bill. The tax features of the measure as it passed the House were eliminated.

DENY GEDDES IS TO MEDIATE YAP QUESTION

Washington, Feb. 26.—The United States has not asked Sir Auckland Geddes, British ambassador, to mediate the question of the Isle of Yap, the State Department announced today in denial of published reports that the British ambassador was to act as mediator between the United States and Japan.

ARMY APPOINTMENTS HELD UP BY SENATE

Washington, Feb. 26.—By a vote of 84 to 36, the Senate defeated a motion by Senator Robinson, Democrat, of Arkansas, providing that the Senate go into executive session to consider confirmation of major army officer appointments. Robinson charged that the Republicans were withholding confirmation of higher army officers "that a Republican President might send them a new list based on partisan preference."

STANDARD OIL CORNERS VAST ABYSSINIAN FIELDS

Paris, Feb. 26.—The Standard Oil Company, according to Rome dispatches received here today, has obtained by virtue of a royal Italian decree sole rights to exploit the vast Abyssinian fields in Africa, which, up to the present, had been believed conceded to the English oil group.

The agents of the Standard Oil are said to have also obtained large concessions in Poland, Ukraine, Hungary and Nationalist Turkey.

COHEN AND BLONDE ON WAY NORTH

Tall Girl Known as His Wife While He Was in Mexico City

Louis Cohen, missing assistant treasurer of the New England Piano and Phonograph Company, has left Mexico City for Texas with a tall blonde known as his wife, the Boston American learned today.

The information was contained in a dispatch from the Boston American correspondent in Mexico City, and is regarded as corroboration of the charge that Cohen eloped with Edith Violet Burns, his former employe.

Mrs. Cohen, the deserted wife and mother of a small boy, had declared that her husband did not elope, and

DEARBORN WEEKLY IS UNDER NEW BAN

Ford's Independent Not on File in Boston, Says Librarian Belden

Henry Ford's international weekly, the Dearborn Independent, has been barred from the public library of Hartford, Ct., because of its attacks on the Jews.

The trustees took this course after the librarian in Portland, Me., had taken similar action and after protests from Hartford Jews had prevented the circulation of the publication.

In Boston today inquiry by those opposed to Mr. Ford's propaganda disclosed the fact that Ford's paper is not and never has been on file either at the Central Public Library in Copley square or at any branch station.

"The paper has come into prominence only recently," said Librarian Charles Belden.

Bank Will Forgive Boy Who Stole $772,000

By International News Service.

Chicago, Feb. 26.—A seventeen-year-old boy bearing the name of a once famous pair of bandits, is fleeing today in an automobile from a legion of detectives and police, who declare they are closing in on his trail.

The boy is William Dalton, Chicago's greatest bank thief, who calmly went to lunch on Thursday taking with him $772,000 worth of Liberty Bonds from the Northern Trust Company, where he was employed.

Immunity if he surrenders and returns the bank's loot was offered young Dalton by W. S. Miller, vice-president of the Northern Trust Company.

"I am satisfied that if the boy will give himself up now and restore the bonds there will be no prosecution," Mr. Miller stated.

"The matter, of course, is in the hands of the authorities but because of the fact that this is the first time young Dalton has been in trouble the bank is willing to give him another chance.

WOULD AID BOY.

"The bank officials are human. They are willing to drop the matter and aid the boy in making a man of himself if he only will give himself up. The only thing we fear is that an older man might have influenced him in this crime."

W. E. Webster, superintendent of the detective agency which is directing the search on behalf of the bank, declared today that he expected to have young Dalton in custody by tonight.

Detectives believe they have picked up a definite clew in the report that the boy spent Thursday night in Waukegan, north of Chicago, and are confident that in following the trail they are on the right track.

M. S. Darr, a salesman for Ray P. Mudd & Co., automobile dealers, has identified Dalton as the youth who attempted to purchase a second-hand car from him on Thursday night, tendering Liberty Bonds in payment. Darr declared that another man a

FIRE IN HOME OF PRESIDENT LOWELL

Fire in the home of President A. Lawrence Lowell of Harvard University early today forced Mr. and Mrs. Lowell and their servants to get out of bed, caused about $1,000 damage to the kitchen and attracted several hundred Harvard students, who jumped from their beds to help fight the blaze.

From some unknown cause the fire started in a pile of papers in the kitchen, which forms an annex to the main building and extends into the college yard. The fire quickly climbed to the ceiling of the kitchen and had worked its way into the woodwork when one of the maids noticed smoke.

President Lowell was notified and he called the fire department. Mrs. Lowell and the rest of the occupants of the house were roused from sleep and dressed for eventualities.

Only one fire wagon responded at

Champ Clark Is Better

Champ Clark and his daughter, Mrs. James H. Thompson, posed just before Miss Genevieve became a bride. She was expected to rejoin her father in Washington today.

Although Congressman Champ Clark, ill in Washington, was somewhat better today, his son and daughter have been summoned to be near him in case of need.

Clark, former candidate for the Democratic nomination for President, and for years Democratic House leader and later Speaker, is nearly seventy-one years old.

Dr. Jesse Knoup, Mr. Clark's physician, stated that, while the veteran political leader was holding his own and appeared to be on the mend, he was not entirely out of danger. Mr. Clark was taken ill about a week ago with an attack of acute indigestion. Later arterio-sclerosis set in with other diseases complicating his condition. Pleurisy has added to the seriousness of the case.

Bennett Clark of St. Louis, son of the Democratic warhorse, and Mrs. James H. Thompson of New Orleans, his daughter, were expected in Washington today, and will remain there until his recovery is assured.

Several Massachusetts politicians who in 1912 were among the staunchest supporters of the former speaker in his fight for the Democratic nomination today sent messages wishing him a speedy return to health.

WIDOW IS SAVED AS 20 FLEE FLAMES

Defective Heater Starts Fire Which Endangers Many Lives at Worcester

Worcester, Feb. 26.—Mrs. Clara Crisand, a widow, was rescued today and about twenty other occupants of a rooming house were driven to the street when fire broke out in a block at the corner of Main and May streets today.

The blaze started from a defective heating in the basement of a store occupied by the Harry Davidson Masterpiece Company, and caused damage estimated at $6,000.

The alarm rebuts of a string of two-story commercial cards on Main street, with a rooming house adjoining them at No. 1 May street.

The flames worked up through the floor No. 1 by Harry Davidson's store and spread to adjoining offices, while clouds of smoke filled the rooming house.

The flames were discouraged by the dense smoke.

U. S. FACTOR IN COUNTER PROPOSAL BY GERMANY

RETURN OF PROPERTY SOUGHT

Amount of Reparation Germany Is Willing to Pay Shrouded in Secrecy

By KARL H. VON WIEGAND,
Boston American Staff Correspondent

Berlin, Feb. 26.—The counter-proposals which Germany will make at the London conference to the reparation arrangement decided upon by the Allies at Paris will be so conditional that no definite decision can be expected much before the end of March.

The exact figure which the German delegation will name to the allied leaders at London as the utmost reparation possible has been kept secret thus far. Every effort is being made to guard the secret until the Foreign Minister officially announces it in London.

RESTS WITH SILESIA.

Various reports are current that Foreign Minister Simons will submit a total figure of between 132 billion marks and 150 billion marks. In authoritative quarters these reports are characterized as mere conjectures.

It is learned, however, from authoritative sources that the figures passed upon by the German Cabinet are conditional upon Upper Silesia voting at the plebiscite of March 20 to remain with Germany, upon the return to Germany of property seized by American and other Entente countries during the war, and that German citizens everywhere be given political and commercial rights on a basis of absolute equality with other nationalities.

Should Upper Silesia decide to join Poland through the plebiscite emphasis will be laid by Foreign Minister Simons at London that the whole program of reparations is upset thereby and will have to be worked out anew.

It appears that the German counter proposals will reject the proposition for a 12½ per cent. tax on all exports.

SURVEY COMPLETED.

A majority of the forty men, leaders in all branches of business, commerce, finance and industries in Germany, called together to make a survey of what Germany can do in the way of reparations, have made their conclusions.

They strongly oppose the Allied control of the granting of credits. This control idea is believed to be directed on one hand against American trade with Germany, and on the other hand against German trade with Russia.

The delegation is expected to leave on a special train Sunday with a number about sixty, and will be headed by Foreign Minister Simons. Generals Von Seeckt and Stresemi will represent the Ministry of Defence on the armament question.

NEW GUN COURSES FOR B. U. STUDENTS

New courses in grenades, pistols, trench mortar and the 37-millimeter (one-pounder) will be started by the juniors in the Boston University R. O. T. C. on March 14. The grenade course will cover the history of explosives, detonations, and a study of the American, English, German and French grenades. The uses of the trench mortar, the tanks, the nomenclature and the classes of fire will also form a part of this course.

few years older than Dalton, who gave the name of E. J. Oblinski, was with Dalton when they came to buy the car. Darr offered them the car, he said, for $275 and Oblinski paid a deposit of $75, but did not return. It is believed that Dalton later purchased a coupe at another agency. Employes of the Hewes Garage at Waukegan have identified Dalton as the youth who left a coupe in the garage on Thursday night, went to the Salvation Army Hotel, where he was given a cot, called for the car at 6:15 o'clock Friday morning and drove away towards the north.

Detective Webster believes that Dalton was inspired to robbery by reading of the exploits of the Dalton brothers, famous bandits of the days of Jesse James and Cole Younger.

"We find that he has read countless books about the Dalton brothers," Webster said, "and that he loved to call attention to the fact that his name was Dalton. We are sure that this influenced the boy in as otherwise apparently motiveless case."

Webster declared he had learned that Dalton had dropped off a number of bonds of small denominations in Chicago, thus obtaining funds to finance his flight. It has been learned that Dalton was "broke" on the morning of the robbery and borrowed some small change from a fellow bank clerk to buy his lunch.

Rewards totalling $16,000 have been offered.

LISCOMB ADMITS HITTING WIFE ON CHEEK

Resented Abuse, He Testifies; Court Defers Divorce Decision

Charles F. Liscomb described in the Middlesex Superior Divorce Court how he struck his wife in the cheek and then helped her to a chair so that she could recover from the effects of the blow.

He was the last witness in rebuttal before the final arguments were presented by counsel and the divorce case was taken under consideration by Judge Cox. Liscomb is seeking divorce and custody of two children on the grounds of unfaithfulness, while her cross-suit is for cruelty and non-support.

RESENTED ABUSE.

"We got into a discussion and she told me before the children that I was a bad man. Two days later I had taken enough abuse and for the sake of the children I would not stand for any more and struck her in front of them.

"I demanded that she take back what she said and she refused. So I pushed her from the dining room into the kitchen, held her up against the wall and struck her on the cheek. Then I helped her to a chair."

He said he understood that the next day his wife went to a doctor to have her cheek attended to.

Mrs. Mabel S. Liscomb, the wife, is the woman who was mysteriously wounded by a shot while in her car on the Mystic Valley Parkway on December 22, for which Thomas Tate, a boarder at the Liscomb home in Lexington, is indicted. John W. Daley of Somerville is named as co-respondent by the husband in his divorce libel.

HUSBAND KNEW OF PHOTOS.

Mrs. Liscomb, under re-direct examination, testified that the snapshots introduced by her husband's counsel and showing her in the arms of different men were pictures taken at "parties," and that her husband knew the pictures had been taken and never reproved her.

Attorney Lafayette R. Chamberlain, for the husband, declared in argument that evidence had been introduced that Mrs. Liscomb was guilty of unfaithfulness on five occasions—three times in Lexington, once in Boston and once in Portland, Me. He reviewed the testimony of several witnesses to substantiate his claim.

Attorney Devine acted to impeach the testimony of Miss Nellie G. Hoddon, a nurse, who had testified to knowledge of incidents of unfaithfulness charged against Mrs. Liscomb. Devine said that her testimony was that of "a jealous woman." He said that Miss Hoddon had been instructed by counsel for the husband.

first, but when it had arrived a general alarm was sent out and several other pieces of apparatus came.

Firemen had difficulty in reaching the flames as the fire started in the ceiling of the kitchen and threatened to spread to the rest of the house, so they used their axes freely. Only one was prevented from reaching beyond the kitchen.

Noise of the fire wagons clanging down Quincy street, where the house is situated, aroused college students asleep in dormitories and they rushed to the Lowell home, some minus neckties and with shoe laces untied.

Can Marry Every Day in Los Angeles

Los Angeles, Feb. 26.—"With a new suit and a shave, I could get married every day in Los Angeles. The women in this town like adventure."

This bit of "expert opinion" was given by E. R. Grossett, alleged "love pirate," in the county jail on a charge of bigamy, just after he had been arraigned before Judge Baird and his bail fixed at $5,000. The date for the preliminary hearing was set for March 3.

Grossett, according to his own story, has been married four times. His present difficulties resulted from the fact that he is said to have married the fourth time before his matrimonial ties to wife number three had been severed.

SALES TAX PLAN FAVORED BY RETAILERS

Bay State Merchants Vote Unanimously for New Revision Measure

Massachusetts retail merchants are in favor of the sales tax plan drafted by the National Retail Dry Goods Association, when tax revision comes.

In a referendum promoted by the Massachusetts Retail Merchants' Association, the members voted unanimously in favor of this plan.

The taxation committee of the association decided to present this program to the members after considering various other schemes for replenishing taxation funds. Among the programs considered were those advocated by the National Tax Conference Board, the National Association of Manufacturers and the General Turnover Tax advocates.

The taxation committee consisted of A. Barry Bacon of Chandler & Company; Maurice Wrigley of the Jordan March Company; Fred Vorenberg of the Gilchrist Company; James W. Eagle, Jr., taxation specialist and auditor, and L. E. Studley of the Chatfield Company, Lowell.

The recommendations of the committee were based on the reports of several government experts who have declared it will raise the necessary revenue, is simple of administration, and will result in a more nearly just distribution of tax burdens.

Three pouches containing registered mail and considerable parcel post matter were stolen. Two pouches of the latter remained. The extent of the loss is so far unknown, government railroad officials said.

20 P. C. PAY CUT ON BAY STATE ANNOUNCED

Trustees Say Present Union Agreement is Detrimental to Company's Interest in a letter from the public trustees to Charles A. Taylor, secretary of the Joint Conference Board of the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employes of America.

The trustees declare they will reduce the fares on all the lines of the road when the twenty per cent wage reduction goes into effect on May 1 when the company's agreement with the men terminates.

Union leaders questioned whether the trustees had obtained figures from the United States Labor Bureau of Statistics showing that the living cost had been reduced more than twenty per cent. since May 1, 1920, adding that if such figures were issued they are not supported by conditions in Massachusetts.

Under the proposed reduction the wages of conductors and motormen on the road will revert to 46, 48 and 51 cents an hour, according to length of service. On May 2 the pay of operators of one-man cars will be 51, 53 and 56 cents an hour.

Approximately 4,000 employes will be affected by the reduction.

A vigorous effort will be made to resist the proposed wage slash by the trustees, union leaders said today.

James H. Vahey, counsel for the carmen, is now in Florida, but it is believed that when he learns of the situation he will return to fight the proposed reduction.

The trustees declare that, aside from their belief that the living cost has been reduced twenty per cent., they are justified in reducing wages on May 1 because they have been unable to operate the lines of the road for the best interest of the public under the existing agreement with the carmen's association.

TRUSTEES' LETTER.

The trustees' letter follows:

"The existing agreement between this company and the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employes of America and the several divisions thereof runs up to and including May 1, 1921. The public trustees hereby notify you that the company does not desire to renew said agreement and that effective May 2, 1921, it cancels and terminates each and every section of said agreement.

"The public trustees have taken this action because experience has proven that many conditions of the existing agreement have been detrimental to the best interests of the car riders and make it extremely difficult to operate this street railway properly and for the benefit of the public.

"The company will take up with your association at any time the subject of a new agreement much similar to that than the present agreement.

"Last September an arbitration award increased wages of employes of this company 20 per cent., effective from May 2, 1920, to May 1, 1921. This increase was based upon increased cost in living up to May 1, 1920.

"According to the United States Labor Bureau of Statistics and other authorities the cost of living has declined more than 20 per cent. since May 1, 1920.

"Wages in practically every industry have been and are being reduced in accordance with the decrease in the cost of living and the public naturally has the right to expect that wages of street railway employes shall be no exception.

"If street railway wages remain at high war levels, while the wages of everyone else are being reduced, substantially lower car fares will be impossible.

"Therefore we advise you that on and after May 2, 1921, the basic rated of wages that prevailed prior to the last increase, which became effective May 1, 1920, will be restored; the differential for one-man car operators will remain at 5 cents.

"Fares will be reduced in every district in the Bay State System on the day when this change in wages takes effect."

Wage Cuts Announced in Several Centres

Wage cuts of from 10 to 20 per cent in different communities and various industries are reported.

At Lawrence arrangements for the conference Monday between the Master Builders Association and the Building Trades relative to the proposed 20 per cent. cut have been completed. The cut goes into effect March 1.

The big Whitin Machine Works at Whitinsville has announced a drop in wages effective Monday, which will affect 4,000 employes. The amount of the reduction has not been specified.

In Halifax the big shipyards have reduced the wages of 3,000 employes 20 cents an hour, an aggregate of 10 per cent, and the Pennsylvania railroad is reported considering a further curtailment in working force. The company has cut wages 20 per cent. in two months.

The Master Plumbers and the Master Carpenters' Associations of Lynn have announced a wage reduction of 10 cents an hour for carpenters and 22½ cents an hour for plumbers, effective May 1. The carpenters are now getting $1 and the plumbers, steamfitters and sheet metal workers $1.12½ an hour. All have been cut to 90 cents an hour after May 1.

SCHOOL BOARD CHARGED WITH DECEPTION

Fin. Com. Says $216 Salary Limit Was Exceeded Despite Schedule

Arraying themselves on the side of Mayor Peters, the Finance Commission declares in a report that the School Committee deceived the Mayor, the Governor and the commission as to the amount of salary increases to be granted to teachers based upon a legislative act increasing the tax limit for school purposes.

The Governor signed the measure on condition finds that in spite of the contention of the School Committee that it is difficult to induce young women to take up school teaching, the committee reduced the salaries of teachers entering the service $36 annually while other teachers scheduled to receive $216 were increased up to $432.

Every representation made by the school committee was based upon a schedule that called for no increases above $216, making $600 increase in two years, the report states. To one group increases of $432 were granted, to another $384, to a third group $360, while 2,000 teachers were increased $248.

Had the committee made known its intention to exceed the $216 limit, the Mayor could have disapproved the legislative act and the school committee would have no remedy, the Finance Commission stated. Instead, they passed the increases over his veto.

that the Burns girl was hiding somewhere in Greater Boston.

The despatch received today, was dated at Mexico City and read: "Cohen left Wednesday for Texas. There week at Hotel Regis with tall blonde as wife."

INTERESTED IN OIL.

Cohen's trip from Mexico City to Texas is believed to have been in connection with the oil business, as telegrams to Boston friends announced that he had become interested in oil fields.

On his way South, following his departure from Boston, Cohen wired his wife at 51 Morton street, Roxbury, that he was going to Mexico City and could be reached at the University Club there. In reply to a telegram from her addressed to the University Club, he wired his wife he was not as bad as painted and instructed her to "sit tight."

Mrs. Cohen, who was formerly Dorothy Zax, admits that her husband was often in the company of Miss Burns, but only in connection with his business.

"I do not know anything about my husband eloping with Edith Violet Burns or any other woman," said Mrs. Cohen. "I have been in constant communication with him. Monday I received a telegram from him from Texas stating that he was well and happy. I also received a letter and some money from him. I expect to hear from him again this coming Monday."

DOES NOT CONDEMN HIM.

"Just because he was in the company of the Burns girl in a business way, and because the newspapers link their names as having eloped, is no reason why I should believe such a story. I do not hesitate to say that the Burns girl is now living in a suburb of Boston, just where I do not wish to say.

"I cannot condemn my husband as I have no proof that he eloped with any woman. I have faith that he will return and prove to the world that the stories printed about him are imaginary. It is true that I assisted him in his law studies. He was admitted to the practice of law in this State in 1917. I have nothing against Miss Burns. I have been away from me three weeks. During that time he and I have been in touch with each other. He has sent me money all along.

"Why should I condemn him? Why should I lose faith in him when he sends me such endearing letters? Why, he tells me in the letters of his love for me and our child. I would be an ingrate to believe what I hear about him. I found nothing wrong in his walking with the Burns girl if other people did.

"Louis is twenty-eight years old. He has been a good husband to me. He is ambitious and went to Texas to look over some oil wells in which he is interested. He told me in his letter that everything is getting along all right. If he was with another woman do you think he'd write such letters and send me money?"

Suspect New Romance in Harriman Divorce

Newport, R. I., Feb. 26.—Members of Newport's most exclusive social set today are wondering if back of the astonishing suit for divorce, filed by Mrs. Herbert Melville Harriman, against her millionaire husband, who is a cousin of the late railroad king and financial magnate, there lies a story of a new romance in the checkered matrimonial career of the former Miss Brady, and famous New York beauty.

Those who know her best refuse to talk about the matter, other than to say, what all the world now knows, that the married life of the Harrimans has been unhappy of late, and that the divorce proceedings, in which the wife alleges failure to provide, have been expected for some time.

Cupid and Hymen have played important roles in the career of Mrs. Harriman. As a young girl, the daughter of the late Judge John H. Brady of New York, she was a noted beauty, and ruled with despotic sway over her large train of admirers that was in the late eighties, and when she became Mrs. C. Robert Stevens of Castle Rock, Hoboken, all the city attended her wedding—at least all the city that was socially admirable.

Her life as Mrs. Stevens appeared to have been most happy and when her husband died several years later, he left her the bulk of his enormous property without tying a string of any sort to it.

FLED TO EUROPE.

Mrs. Stevens seemed heartbroken by her husband's death, and fled to Europe to escape the sympathy of her many New York and Newport friends. She remained abroad for a number of years, and then society awoke one day in 1902 to find her back home again, this time as the bride of Major Charles Spencer Hall.

Major Hall, a retired British army officer, who had served all the world over in Queen Victoria's armies, proved an excellent foil for the many peculiarities immensely amused Newport society folk, then not so familiar with the Anglish tastes of some of European society males.

He was in the habit of spending hours daily at his knitting, and his embroidering became famous for its beauty.

Whether it was his predilection for such amusements or his inability to assimilate the American point of view, no one here ever knew, but in December, 1907, the Harriman social set was startled by the announcement that Mrs. Hall, as she was then, had decided to divorce her British husband. That divorce was obtained on the ground that he had failed to provide for her, a thing that had been perfectly obvious to all their friends from the start.

The following August, while society was still talking of the divorce, came the announcement that Mrs. Hall was to become Mrs. Herbert M. Harriman.

FILES COUNTER SUIT.

On the heels of this announcement came another choice morsel of gossip, for Major Hall, then in London, filed a counter suit for divorce from his wife, charging that the American affair had been based upon illegal grounds, in view of the fact that his wife was a woman of independent means. He was given his decree in the English courts.

The marriage to Mr. Harriman united the former Miss Brady to her old set in New York, for Mr. Harriman is the son of the late Oliver Harriman, brother of Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt, sr., Mrs. Stephen H. Olin and Mrs. Frederick C. Havemeyer.

He is the possessor of a great fortune in his own name, although for a time, as a young man, he worked as a clerk in the Union Pacific offices in Omaha.

Later he won more fame as amateur golf champion of the United States, and because of his unhappy marital affairs. His first wife was Miss Isabelle Hunnewell of Boston, who divorced him in 1904.

In addition to their beautiful home, The Pines, here in Newport, Mr. and Mrs. Harriman had a residence at No. 138 East Fifty-sixth street, New York.

CHAIRS STOP SHIMMY AS DERRY 'GHOSTS' TAKE VACATION

REPORTERS HUNT FOR 'SPIRITS'

But Prancing Tables and Flying Pillows Suddenly Become Apathetic

Derry, N. H., Feb. 25.—The table tippings, chair rockings and other manifestations which have made the old Lowd home on High Range the most discussed house in the country, are apparently not for the eyes of newspapermen.

Reporters who visited the so-called ghost house near Crowell's Corner were able to find nothing unusual taking place, and during their stay not a pillow was thrown.

This fact, taken in connection with a previous incident when elderly Mrs. Sadley Lowd, the occupant of the house, was struck on the face by a piece of rock maple very evidently thrown, led to the belief that the manifestations were the work of a human agent.

It is believed that the alleged "ghost" is either a practical joker with a particularly distorted sense of humor, or some person or persons who desire to destroy the Mrs. Lowd from the house.

The dwelling is a large, square, old-fashioned farmhouse built long ago, and occupied by the Lowd family for forty years. Mr. Lowd, a Civil War veteran, was town librarian for many years until his death about three years ago.

During the period of the Lowd's occupancy of the farmhouse, there have never been any unusual incidents except those of the last few days, which have been told and retold by the family and neighbors until the belief has gone abroad that the dwelling is haunted.

Will Mrs. Lowd lives her grandson, Frank E. Smith, son of Mrs. Effie Smith of Manchester, and his step-brother John Graves, who is employed on the farm of Horace Hurd, 100 feet away.

SILVERWARE GOES A. W. O. L.

The series of strange incidents began Saturday night when buttons flew out of a work basket and scattered about the room. Then tables were tipped unexpectedly, chairs were rocked, cushions thrown from room to room and silverware vanished through windows.

Mrs. Smith, on hearing of these happenings, went to her mother's home, and according to her own statement, experienced similar manifestations. Reporters were then sent to the house, but although they waited patiently and in receptive mood, nothing happened.

Since Saturday, the Lowds and Mr. Graves had been in a constant state of apprehension, not knowing what new turn events were going to take. Following the button episode last week the family while sitting about the home were startled by the nonston flight of pillows from the east bedroom to the kitchen.

Following this, at the table in the dining room was heard a tapping of dishes, the silverware went A. W. O. L. One of the forks was last seen acting through the open window. A search was later made for it, but it has departed for parts unknown.

But a trifle matter like the loss of silver did not deter the family from eating and Mrs. Lowd drew on the reserve supply, but not until all were seated so that they could keep a close watch for more disappearances.

Becoming alarmed at the stories reaching her and fearing for the safety of her mother, Mrs. Smith spent a day at the Lowd home. And, proof that the unearthly specimen plays no favorites was evidenced shortly after her arrival, when a stove length of compressed rock maple, prepared from the deep recesses of the woodbox behind the stove, struck the visitor full on the nape of the neck, drawing blood to flow and leaving a scar which will be carried by her for a few months to come.

TOE DANCING BY CHAIRS.

The uncanny spirit was also experimenting with the chairs in the house. His barbaric appreciation of fondness — rocking, straight - backed lounge, benches—they all took alike. The big docile of his first experiment in parlor gymnastics were the chairs in the sitting room and kitchen.

Under his direction, three of the legs ballooned, leaving only one to carry on the plain and fancy exhibition of toe dancing. Evidently they were improperly shod or else the floor was not in conspiracy with the scheme, for after a few seconds of dizzy whirling about, all, without exception keeled over and fell to the floor.

While every member of the household was seated about the living room, the rockers were seen to begin exercising, finally working up to such a speed as to topple over face downward on the floor. This happened to not one but two chairs of this variety in the house.

The house which is situated three miles from the Manchester-Derry electric carline, about three miles from Crowell's corner, on the tract known as High Range has become a Mecca for the curiosity-bitten. The house, which is a two-story structure with an ell, containing eight large rooms is more than a half century old.

GIRL OFFENDERS TIED TO BEDS IN PRISONS

Others Fed Like Animals in Bay State as Punishment, Says Dr. Briggs

Trying delinquent young women by hands and feet to the edges of beds because they refused to work at the tasks assigned them, keeping them sometimes thirty-six hours in this position, is still carried on in institutions of Massachusetts, according to Lieutenant-Colonel L. Vernon Briggs, M. R. C., prominent alienist and lately division psychiatrist, headquarters, second division, Germany.

"This punishment was intended to make these defectives give in," explained the doctor, in an address before the Massachusetts Medical Society.

"Another mode of treatment as carried on in a prison in this State, is to lock girls up like wild animals in special rooms, where they are fed by pushing in bowls of milk and bread, or other light diet, through partly open doors until their spirit is broken.

"This class of defectives, neither insane nor feeble minded, need special study and scientific care and treatment in order to bring out the best that is in them.

"I have always advocated, and do now advocate, a separate institution or school for the training of this class of persons that they may be taken out of prisons, out of our State hospitals and schools for feeble minded and given over to the care of a staff of scientists and teachers who will not attempt to handle them as a unit, but will study each individual.

200 STOLEN CARS RECOVERED BY STATE

New Card Index System in Motor Vehicle Registry Quick to Find Thefts

Nearly 200 stolen autos have been recovered in this State within a year by the Used Car Division of the State Motor Vehicle Registry, it is announced.

The records show it has recovered cars valued at more than $600,000, about 100 stolen cars which the Boston Police Department had failed to locate. In all, about 400 stolen-car records had been turned over by the Boston department.

The department is doing its work through a card index system devised by Edward A. McDonough.

Under the law, the sale of every used car must be reported to the registry. Every "hot" or stolen car is supposed to be reported by the police authorities.

The cars are classified according to their makes and are listed numerically by the engine numbers. The stolen and lost cars are indexed on blue cards.

Whenever an applicant registers a car, the record of its make and engine number is turned over to the Used Car Division. If the number is found on a blue card, the applicant is made to explain how he came into possession of the car.

The division has 1,800 blue cards showing cars stolen in various sections of the country.

The division will ask the Legislature for the passage of a law to compel police authorities of every city and town to submit a record of every stolen car reported to them.

Hub Women Dash for Cars as if in War

Boston women in a rush for a street car or a ticket window make a German charge seem tame by comparison.

So decided a group of officers of the First Army Corps area, discussing the "deadliness" of the female species in the comparative safety of headquarters in Chaumpy street.

Most of them have been "over there." Now that they are back "over here," exposed to the terrors of women's sharp elbows, long hatpins and ruthless rushes, they long at times for the quiet and calm of their battlefield days.

Here's Major W. J. Hagins, for whom the dreaded zero hour held no terrors in France, but who pales at the thought of going "over the top" in the subway at rush flour.

"I'm a great sufferer in these charges by determined women in crowded places," he said plaintively.

"I'm shoved about and have difficulty avoiding being sank without trace. I am particularly afraid of the wicked elbow punch so many of your fair fellow voters have mastered in this city.

"This condition, in which the so-called weaker sex tramples on the rights and even the corns of others is particularly noticeable in this city. They are far more arrogant than the men."

Colonel R. S. Abernathy, C. A. C., added his testimony as to the military efficiency with which women brush aside mere males.

"I want to be courteous" he said pliably. "I try to be. But a Boston cowd knocks the politeness out of me.

"When I attempt to be polite I am always left waiting for a street car or outside a theatre ticket window. Even the most persistent urbanity would give way under such conditions. And the colonel sighed.

Others chimed in. They agreed, according to that coterie of fighting men, fair ladies, you may be most delightful individually but in subway flights, box office affrays and other mob scenes you are simply "terrors."

REWARD GERMAN FOR SERVICE TO AMERICA

New York, 26.—As a reward for his service to America in the manufacture of poison gas which was used against his own country, Dr. Walter T. Scheele, a German chemist, was let off with a one-day sentence in custody of a marshal after pleading guilty of conspiracy to plant bombs aboard the out-going ships during the war.

Of eight other defendants indicted with Scheele, six pleaded guilty and were sentenced to terms ranging from six months to two years and to fines of $500 to $5,000 each. The

PROTEST HARRIS AS MEDFORD SCHOOL HEAD

Hundreds Sign Petition Objecting to Popular Idol as Superintendent

The spectacle of one of the most popular men in a city being opposed for the position of superintendent of schools by a large proportion of citizens, on the ground that he is not fitted by training for the position, is presented in Medford.

A petition signed by hundreds of representative citizens was sent to the Medford School Committee, protesting against confirmation of the appointment of James G. Harris as superintendent of schools.

The petition states that in addition to Harris' lack of training, the proposed salary of $6,500, $1,000 more than the previous superintendent was, was out of all proportion to the city's finances.

Mr. Harris, who is a member of the School Board, has been acting superintendent of schools for a year, since the resignation of Fred H. Nickerson, who became superintendent in Quincy.

The acting superintendent was a member of former Governor Coolidge's Council, was president of the Medford Board of Aldermen and chairman of the Republican City Committee previously. While serving as acting superintendent of schools his work brought favorable comment from many parents.

Harris did not seek the office of superintendent and is said to have declared he would refuse it if tendered him. Nevertheless the citizens are taking no chances and have registered their disapproval of his appointment, although admitting him to be one of the most popular men in Medford.

This action is taken as a direct slap at the school board, of which frequent criticism has been heard in city government and in connection with the schoolhouse construction program.

Further criticism was voiced as a result of the reported election of a member of the school committee to a salaried position under the school administration and to the alleged fact that still another member of the board is drawing a city salary.

Mayor Benjamin F. Haines came in for his share of criticism when Fred W. Hauskolb, formerly one of the mayor's strongest supporters, resigned as a member of the board of trustees of cemeteries.

This resignation was said to have resulted from the refusal of the city to pay a bill for legal services rendered by counsel for the cemetery trustees during an investigation of that body by the board of aldermen, in which the trustees were characterized of charges of irregularities.

WILSON EXPECTED TO SIGN RAILROAD BILL

Washington, Feb. 26.—The Winslow bill, providing for immediate compensation of railroads under the transportation act of 1920, is before President Wilson for signature. It is understood that the Interstate Commerce Commission has approved it, and that the Treasury Department offers no objection to it, therefore President Wilson is expected to sign the bill before March 4.

Girl Is Victim of Singing Sickness

Lomira, Wis., Feb. 25.—"Singing sickness" is the latest malady to puzzle physicians today.

Miss Alvine Schwartz, twenty years old, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Schwartz of this town, has been stricken with a peculiar ailment, during which she sings and talks incessantly.

On Thursday Miss Schwartz talked continuously for five hours.

Although puzzled as to the cause of the affliction, physicians have discovered that the slightest noise or jar reacts on the girl's nerves so that she sings and talks for hours at a time.

Her ailment is believed to be a form of encephalitis lethargica, which also causes "sleeping sickness."

SLEEP SICKNESS KILLS MALDEN MAN OF 58

Eleventh Victim in Greater Boston Since January 1 Dies in Hospital

One more sleeping sickness death has been reported in Greater Boston, making the eleventh since the first of the year. The victim was Nathan Flashman, fifty-eight years old, of No. 520 Bryant street, Malden. He died at the City Hospital.

New York, Feb. 26.—Four deaths and three new cases of sleeping sickness were reported to the New York health department today.

London, Feb. 26.—No remedy has yet been found for "sleeping sickness," according to a report by the chief dairy of Health today following a world investigation of the malady. According to the report the malady is growing more frequent in most countries. There were 102 cases reported thus far this year as against 258 for the entire first quarter of 1920. The deaths in England for 1920 totalled 918.

The Health Ministry recommends isolation and careful nursing. The disease is declared to have no connection with influenza or the hiccough epidemic.

'BACK TO THE FARM' MOVEMENT GROWS

An exodus back to the farm has followed wholesale curtailment in manufacturing in the cities and the break in wages, according to figures received by the U. S. Employment Agency from 168 offices throughout the country. Twice as many people are going back to till the soil today, as compared with a year ago. In New England farm sales are running 300 per cent. ahead of last year.

EXPRESSMAN CRUSHED TO DEATH BY ENGINE

Charles J. P. Howard, 31 years old, of No. 200 Prospect street, Somerville, died at the Relief Hospital from injuries received when he was crushed by a locomotive while on duty at the South Station.

Childbirth Causes 700 Deaths Yearly

Between 600 and 700 mothers are being needlessly sacrificed at childbirth each year in Massachusetts, says Dr. James L. Huntington of No. 311 Marlboro street, obstetrician and staff member of the Boston Lying-In Hospital.

This sacrifice of mothers is due in too many cases, Dr. Huntington charges, to the reprehensibly low requirements exacted by the State of Massachusetts for registration of physicians.

At present Massachusetts, which from of old, has prided herself on her education and her advancement, nevertheless admits to practice doctors graduated from two medical schools which are rated in class C by the American Medical Association.

Massachusetts, supposed to be in the van of progress, and the home of the precise sciences, still cannot send the doctors she accepts for registration to thirty-nine other States and have them allowed to practice there, without additional tests, even though Massachusetts has passed them as fit.

In these thirty-nine States, Massachusetts' registered physicians must pass additional tests, before they are registered. And, while our State is so low, the mothers are dying. As Dr. Huntington pointed out:

IN CLASS C.

"Up to five years ago it was even possible to be registered as a physician in Massachusetts without the degree of M. D. At present there are two medical schools in Massachusetts which, according to the latest report of the American Medical Association, are in class C. That means colleges which require a complete reorganization, to make them acceptable. One has been regreened and as not recognized by the licensing boards of thirty-nine States.

"The other college has been reported as not recognized by the Massachusetts Medical Society and the Massachusetts Board of Registration in Medicine are fixed so low that no other State will reciprocate with Massachusetts; that is, any physician licensed to practice in Massachusetts must be re-examined, should he decide to go into any other State. It would seem that possibly there is some connection between the high mortality in obstetrics, as practiced in Massachusetts, and the obviously low requirements for medical practice in our State.

THE CARE OF MOTHERS.

"Now back to a subject which lies near my heart, that is the proper care of mothers. The present unsanitary conditions at the Boston Lying-In Hospital are possibly not ideal, because of the ancient form of the structure. Probably the best work at the Lying-in is done in the outpatient department. But, in the new hospital, for which sufficient funds are collected to begin construction, there will be adequate provision for the isolation of infected cases.

"That means the isolation of child bed fever cases. We know now that patients afflicted with this should be isolated in a building provided with verandas where fresh air treatment may be applied. For the out-of-door treatment for child fever is as important as for tuberculosis.

"The commission dealing with maternity benefits reported recently that toxaemia was one of the chief causes of maternal mortality. Of more than 6,000 patients treated at the clinic of the Boston Lying-In Hospital during the last two years there has been but one death from this very fatal trouble. Which speaks for itself.

THE DOCTOR PROBLEM.

"Which, finally, brings us back to our low standard for doctors.

"The time has arrived for every woman and every earnest citizen to fight and to legislate to raise the legislative standard. There is a vital connection between the low standards and the high maternal mortality. The argument that has been put forward, most pitifully, that any raising of the requirements would injure "the poor boy, in the poor medical schools, but the advantages scholarships and other aids offered by the best medical schools in the country, make this argument futile.

"It is now absolutely possible for any ambitious student to more than earn his way during his medical training

PASTOR FOND OF PRETTY TYPIST, WIFE CHARGES

Mrs. F. L. Rowe Accuses Vice Crusader in Counter Petition for Divorce

Cincinnati, Ohio, Feb. 24.—"For several years he has paid marked attention to other women, and the defendant has frequently remonstrated with him for this attention, and has charged him with indiscreet conduct on many occasions," declares Mrs. Fayette S. Rowe of Cincinnati, in her cross petition for divorce, filed here against the Rev. Fred L. Rowe, a Christian preacher and vice crusader of national repute.

Rowe is also owner of the Christian Leader, a church publication of national circulation, published in this city.

DENIES NEGLECT.

They were married November 18, 1895. She denies his charge of neglect.

"Our trouble started," the wife avers in her suit, "when we were camping on a river in Kentucky many years ago. He insisted on taking his pretty young waitress stenographer on a boat ride, much to the chagrin and anguish of the petitioner.

"On another occasion, he brought a young woman into my home upon the representation that she was in very hard luck. In a few months the petitioner found she was still on board, and did not expect to."

The wife also charges: "Also accompanied him, although he did not desire her presence. While there he showered attentions upon his young lady stenographer and was entirely indifferent to the comforts of his wife."

CLERGY REMONSTRATED.

The latter says "He attended conferences of the Church of Christ, of which he is a national figure, at Murfreesboro, Tenn., in April, 1917, and had the young woman stenographer attend this conference. His attentions to the stenographer were so marked that they created considerable comment among his clergymen friends.

"Returning here, he and his stenographer occupied the same section on the train. Some of the clergymen friends thereupon remonstrated with him about it, and he offered as an excuse that the young lady was not feeling very well and he thought he ought to be near her during the night so that he could minister to her comfort in the event she became ill."

In Rowe's petition for divorce he charged that his wife "Without cause has insulted guests at his home and has assaulted and insulted his office assistants until several refused to work there."

The young groom has left for Hollaire to join his parents at Mt. and Mrs. George T. Bouther. He has to make his "peace." Meanwhile Georgette is being entertained by Miss Gertrude Graham-White (Ethel Levy, the Great Mrs. Cohan), at the Poinciana.

The young bride is 19 years old, and only three weeks ago at a dinner party recently developed with rapidity

3 CHILDREN ARE KILLED BY FIRE IN VERMONT

Baby Saved by Mother at Bellows Falls Dies After Rescue

Bellows Falls, Vt., Feb. 26.—Two little daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Potter are dead and a baby sister died later as the result of burns suffered during the fire that virtually destroyed the Potter home at No. 10 School street here, Sensational efforts to save the children, all girls, were made by the mother and a friend. Mrs Potter succeeded in rescuing the baby, but not before the little girl's face and hair were severely burned by the flames.

Arthur Mendille, a neighbor, was overcome by smoke in attempting to save the other children, who were trapped in the upper floor. Mendille plunged into the burning two-story tenement house, groped about in the upper floor and finally found the Potters until he located two children. He staggered out of the building, not realizing both children were dead and dropped unconscious to the ground.

The fire is believed to have originated in the chimney. It was discovered by Mrs. Potter who ran down stairs to telephone the fire department. When she returned she found the room filled by the flames surrounding her baby.

The building, which was partly destroyed, is owned by Frank H. Phelps, who occupies the lower apartment.

FEAR SPREAD OF PEABODY STRIKE

Peabody, Feb. 25.—Danger that the general strike declared by 500 workers at the National Casket Company's plant will spread to the allied plant, the A. C. Lawrence Company, with a payroll more than 1,000 workers, was admitted today. The National Caskets workers were called out on the heels of the strike of the tackers, stakers and shavers. The union men demand that the company return to conditions that prevailed prior to January 1, when a wage cut of from 20 to 35 per cent. went into effect. Last November both the Lawrence and the National companies announced that the plants would be operated as open shops.

BERNSTEIN CALLS HENRY FORD A "DANGEROUS FIREBRAND"

STARTS WAR AGAINST JEWS IN NAME OF PEACE, HE SAYS

It is a disease that has been described both by Gentile and Jewish psychologists and criminologists.

Carried away by the power of his millions, he imagines himself lord of all he surveys. He is naive, yet obdurate and obstinate in his whims. He has neither the education nor the calm judgment to weigh and consider the effects of his whims. His actions indicate that he does not know the difference between right and wrong.

His depends entirely upon his lieutenants, upon his favorites who distort the truth to suit his whims. Moved by impulses, capricious as a spoilt child, he rushes to carry out his whimsical designs, putting all his trust in money. He is, indeed, the most dangerous type of firebrand.

When Rosika Schwimmer drew a tempting picture to him of how he could immortalize himself as a peacemaker, and at the same time rub shoulders with the Kings of Europe, he immediately decided upon the peace expedition. He quickly chartered a boat, invited all sorts and conditions of men and women and started out on the strangest pleasure cruise recorded in history. When he saw that he was looked upon as an international clown, he suddenly abandoned the expedition, secretly and cowardly, without a word of explanation, without a word of apology to his fellow-peacemakers.

WAR AGAINST JEWS.

When the World War was over, Mr. Ford started a war of his own against the Jews. And he calls it an educational campaign of peace.

Men like Henry Ford are extremely unsafe. There is no telling how far their schemes will carry them. Such men are easily deluded, duped and deceived. For all sorts of schemers and charlatans are ever present in large numbers, eager to work such an ignorant millionaire to their "cause," to their intrigues and their machinations for their selfish ends.

On the witness stand at the Chicago trial Henry Ford revealed himself better than the most gifted biographer could reveal him. On the Peace Ship some of the official biographers of Henry Ford described him as a "publicist." But that was before he appeared on the witness stand in Chicago. After that even the staff biographers hardly venture to characterize Ford as a "publicist."

TESTIMONY AT CHICAGO.

According to the stenographic report, Mr. Ford under cross-examination answered questions as follows.

"You know of some famous traitors, don't you?"

"I do not," replied Mr. Ford.

"Did you ever hear of Benedict Arnold?" he was asked.

"I have heard the name," said Mr. Ford.

"Who was he?"

"I have forgotten just who he is. He is a writer, I think," answered Mr. Ford.

"A writer?"

"I think so."

"What subjects do you recall he wrote on?"

"I don't remember."

"Did you ever read anything he wrote?"

"Possibly I have, but I don't know," answered Mr. Ford.

"Would you be surprised to be informed that Benedict Arnold was a general in the American army who was a traitor, and betrayed his country?"

"I don't know much about him," replied Mr. Ford.

"You thought he was a writer?"

THOUGHT ARNOLD A WRITER.

"I thought he was a writer," repeated Mr. Ford.

"As an educator, you assumed to educate the American people?"

"Assisted to cause them to think," answered Mr. Ford.

"You assumed to cause them to think about the undertaking which you called a campaign of education?"

"Yes."

"To instruct the American people as to their duties to citizenship at the time of a crisis?" Mr. Ford was asked.

"Instructing the people how they were exploited," answered Mr. Ford.

"Do you understand that it is the duty of a man that undertakes to educate peoples to be educated himself and know what he is talking about?" Mr. Ford was asked.

"Educated, to a certain extent," replied Mr. Ford.

When Mr. Ford was further asked whether a certain passage published in a book bearing his name was correct, he answered:

"If it is in the book."

"If it is in the book?"

"Yes."

"Would you like to see it in the book?"

"I tell you, if it is in the book, sir, it is correct," he answered.

"Did you read it before this was published?"

"I don't think so."

DID NOT RECALL IT.

"You don't know whether what was set out in that connection was anything that you knew anything about at all?" he was asked.

"Perhaps not."

"What is that?"

"Perhaps not at all," replied Mr. Ford.

"Do you recall that you did know anything about it?"

"No, I don't recall."

Asked about the relations between Porto Rico and the United States, Mr. Ford answered:

"I could find a man in five minutes that could tell me all about it."

"You could not find a man who could fill your place in the United States Senate, could you?"

"I never wanted to go to the United States Senate," said Mr. Ford.

"You have heard of the Declaration of Independence?" he was asked.

"Oh, yes," replied Mr. Ford. "That is based on justice."

HEAD DECLARATION.

"Did you ever read it?"

"Yes, I have read it."

"Have you in mind any of the significant things in that?"

"No, I do not," said Mr. Ford. "I know I—— find it in a few minutes somewhere; read it if I want to."

"Do you know when the United States was created?"

"I could find out in a few minutes," replied Mr. Ford.

"Do you know?"

"Don't know so I do, right off hand," was Mr. Ford's answer.

"Did you ever know——"

"I guess I have, yes.

"Can't you tell it?

"I don't know as I can."

"Do you think there is any school boy in the country that could not tell that?

"Do I know that any schoolboy——"

"Hilda't you say that you could name three bankers who started the European war?" Mr. Ford was asked.

"I don't remember?" he answered. "If you did say so, was that true?"

MAY HAVE KNOWN IT.

"At that time I may have known something, or thought I knew something about it," said Mr. Ford.

"Did you know any three bankers that started any war?"

"I don't know whether I did or not I think that, perhaps——"

"If you did, please tell us who they were."

"I don't know who they were," was Mr. Ford's reply.

This shows the mental and intellectual calibre of the man who is entrusted with the task of answering questions as follows.

"You know of some famous traitors, don't you"

"I do not," replied Mr. Ford.

"Did you ever hear of Benedict Arnold " he was asked.

"I have heard the name," said Mr. Ford.

"Who was he?"

"I have forgotten just who he is. He is a writer, I think," answered Mr. Ford.

"A writer?"

"I think so."

"What subjects do you recall he wrote on?"

"I don't remember."

"Did you ever read anything he wrote?"

"Possibly I have, but I don't know," answered Mr. Ford.

"Would you be surprised to be informed that Benedict Arnold was a general in the American army who was a traitor, and betrayed his country?"

"I don't know much about him," replied Mr. Ford.

"You thought he was a writer?"

THOUGHT ARNOLD A WRITER.

"I thought he was a writer," repeated Mr. Ford.

"As an educator, you assumed to educate the American people?"

"Assisted to cause them to think," answered Mr. Ford.

"You assumed to cause them to think about the undertaking which you called a campaign of education?"

"Yes."

"To instruct the American people as to their duties to citizenship at the time of a crisis?" Mr. Ford was asked.

"Instructing the people how they were exploited," answered Mr. Ford.

"Do you understand that it is the duty of a man that undertakes to educate peoples to be educated himself and know what he is talking about?" Mr. Ford was asked.

"Educated, to a certain extent," replied Mr. Ford.

When Mr. Ford was further asked whether a certain passage published in a book bearing his name was correct, he answered:

"If it is in the book."

"If it is in the book?"

"Yes."

"Would you like to see it in the book?"

"I tell you, if it is in the book, sir, it is correct," he answered.

"Did you read it before this was published?"

"I don't think so."

DID NOT RECALL IT.

"You don't know whether what was set out in that connection was anything that you knew anything about at all?" he was asked.

"Perhaps not."

"What is that?"

"Perhaps not at all," replied Mr. Ford.

"Do you recall that you did know anything about it?"

"No, I don't recall."

Asked about the relations between Porto Rico and the United States, Mr. Ford answered:

'Protocols of Zion' Forgery Exposed

The American Hebrew prints in its current issue the following article by Isaac Goldberg:

"At last, and for the first time, it is possible to proclaim and prove that the protocols of the Elders of Zion are from beginning to end, are forgeries.

"Proof of this came into possession of the American Hebrew on Monday, February 21.

"Since 1905, when the protocols made their appearance over the signature of the mysterious Nilus, Jews and fair-minded Gentiles the world over, have sought to prove them a mass of lies. While there has been circumstantial evidence galore, direct evidence was lacking up to this time.

"It is Professor Radziwill, a writer of note on matters Russian and European and a member of an old Russian family, who furnished the direct evidence to the American Hebrew.

"By the greatest good fortune it was learned that the Princess was one of the two persons who had seen the manuscript of the Protocols before it was ready to be spread on Russia and the world. She was found and interviewed. She proved a most valuable witness, kindly, sympathetic and eager.

WRITTEN BY SECRET POLICE.

"The Princess told her story with certainty and without hesitation, as if recalling its unparalleled significance and importance.

"Princess Radziwill saw the manuscript of the Protocols before the work being compiled in Paris by secret agents of the Czar.

"Who, it is said, inspired the forgery and the results that were expected from the publication.

"The Russian people, whose eyes the Protocols were manufactured to open, refused to believe or accept them as other than they are, forgeries, while strangely the rest of the world has not yet found out the truth.

"The Protocols of the Elders of Zion had their beginning in 1884, many years before their publication by Nilus. They were created for a political purpose, following the assassination of Czar Alexander II. and they were again brought into the light for the same ends in 1901.

"Follow the remarkable direct evidence of Princess Radziwill, proving the Protocols to be unscrupulous lies.

THE PRINCESS' STORY.

"After the assassination of Alexander II. his son and successor, the third Alexander, took very much to heart the fate of his father and the latter had been planned and executed entirely by Russians belonging to the higher circles.

"Among them were such Russian notables as Sophie Perowskaya and Jellahoff.

"The inner clique of the ultra-conservative party, however, made every effort to convince Alexander that the assassination of his father was accomplished, not at the hands of Russians, but through the machinations of Jews. That the Jews were planning a general conspiracy to destroy all the monarchs of the earth.

"It was General Orgewsky, then at the head of the Third Section of the police of the Russian State Department, who was charged with the direction of this by fraud and forgery.

"Years afterwards for the post, Count Nicholas Tcherewine, developed into the Protocols of the Elders of Zion.

"Secretly, in pursuance of his bold attack, sent agents to Paris to prepare the false documents and did their work with care and cunning. They searched old books, compiled volumes from Jewish philosophers and ransacked the records of the French Revolution for excerpts of the most inflammatory speeches.

DALKED BY TCHEREWINE.

"All this and more they did with the sole object of attesting to prove that the Jewish people were a gang of murderers, aspiring to overthrow the Russian social order, of which Alexander III. was the head.

"General Orgewsky one of the Third section had no personal entree to the Czar. Realizing this he attempted to reach the Emperor through the person of General Tcherewine, the head of Okhrana (the Czar's personal police). It was the latter's duty to guard the person of the Emperor.

"Tcherewine, however, refused to lend himself to the plot, and as a result, perhaps, Orgewsky soon resigned his post.

"The Paris report—that is, the draft of the forgery—remained in the archive of the Third Section.

"General Tcherewine also, I know, retained a copy, which he included in his memoirs. The original manuscript of this book he left in his will to Czar Nicholas II. A copy he gave to me as I was one of his closest and dearest friends.

OLD PAPER RECALLED.

"And once again, following the Japanese War and at the beginning of the first Russian Revolution, Russian secret agents and police officials, Grand Duke Serge at their head, attempted to allay the fears of their Emperor, this time Nicholas II. Anything to prove that it was Russians were not dissatisfied with his rule was demanded.

"Someone then recalled the old Orgewsky document, stored in the archives of the Third Section. It was brought forth and read. It would do. Agents were dispatched to Paris with instructions to develop and enlarge the original into a better and more modern form.

"I recall the men who took up this task. There was the too famous Rachkowsky. He was the head of the Russian Secret Police in Paris. Manasewitch-Manuiloff was another. This man later wielded a great influence on Prime Minister Sturmer. He was also one of those who used the infamous Rasputin for their own special aims and ambitions. Then there was also Mathew Golowinsky. His mother was a great land owner in the government of Oufa, where I at that time possessed a property.

"I am now referring to the years 1904 and 1905. I lived in Paris at the time. Golowinsky called on me. As his mother's son I received him. I did not know at first that he was in the service of theRussian Secret Police.

"One day he showed me and some friends a manuscript he had been working on with Manuiloff and Rachowsky. He said that this manuscript would prove that there existed a Jewish conspiracy against the peace of the world. The documents to fight this conspiracy, he said, were the wholesale expulsion of Jews from Russia.

"We laughed at the whole affair, but Golowinsky was proud of his achievement.

SEEN BY AMERICAN.

"I handled the manuscript several times. So did my friends, including an American lady now in this country.

"Later I heard that this same manuscript was incorporated by Serge Nilus. The work was published from the press of the late Czar at Tsarskoie Selo.

"Nilus, they say, seem considering all the discussion this forgery has elicited in England and in America, in Russia it remains unnoticed at the time and since has been entirely forgotten.

"Do you know anything about Nilus" the Princess was asked.

"I do not know him just who Serge Nilus was. Some people say he was a Judge and presided either in the higher or lower court in Moscow.

"As to the three men who had most to do with the forgery of the Protocols, where they now live, was another question.

"Rachkowsky disappeared after the revolution of 1917. Manuiloff was sentenced to several years of hard labor for black-mailing. He succeeded in liberty from the Lenin government and is probably working for the Holshevik in Russia. It is said that Golowinsky was in Paris in 1910. He was later arrested in Russia, charged with embezzlement and sentenced to serve a term in Kresty prison. After a while, through the intervention of the Secret Police, he was released. He became a spy, watching Russian emigrants in Paris.

EXPRESSED SURPRISE.

"Strangely, I met this man again at the home of Kowalewsky, the former aid of Count White, when the latter was Finance Minister. When I expressed surprise at seeing Golowinsky there I received this characteristic reply from Kowalewsky. "It is best to have him for a friend. He belongs to the Third Section."

"As to the assertion that the protocols, irrespective of their authenticity, parallel the facts of the Russian Revolution that is nonsense. Everybody in Russia, who knew anything could have prophesied the coming of the revolution. I outlined it myself in my book, "Behind the Veil of the Russian Court," which I wrote under the pseudonym of Count Paul Vassili.

"The revolution is not the work of the Jews. The revolution resulted from historical causes and was inevitable, the same as any other revolution. If the Great War had not come Russian spies would probably have succeeded in overthrowing it for a while, as they repressed the revolution of 1905.

"Why are the Protocols ever were brought to England and America is a mystery to me. This seems clear, however, that they, the part of the forged document into circulation in this and England are of the same class, if not the same ones who, in Russia, acted as spies and secret agents ready to commit all crimes to gain their ends."

URGES FARMERS USE HORSES TO SAVE MARKET

Bureau Head Points Out Loss in Grain Sales by Displacement

New York, Feb. 26.—A warning to farmers that the displacement of horses on farms as well as in cities and villages is a direct blow at their interests has been issued by the Horse Association of America. J. R. Howard, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation, calls attention to the following facts:

"The displacement of horses in the last ten years has destroyed an annual market for 112,000,000 bushels of oats, 10,000,000 bushels of corn and 4,750,000 tons of hay. This means more than the average total export a year on these items.

"The prosperity of this country depends to large extent upon the farmer and the farmer in turn depends upon the markets he is able to reach. I am doing all I can to arouse every farmer to the importance of using horses in farm work and in hauling. There should be a steady development of horse breeding, as this, too, will open up markets which have fallen into disuse."

According to the association, the farmers have lost in two markets—in horse sales and in the sale of their hay and coarse grain. It is estimated that an annual market for 10,000 horses has been destroyed and demands for hay and corn reduced about 288,000,000. This is figuring that each horse displaced consumed $150 worth of feed a year. Curtailment of markets for the farmer is given as one of the chief reasons why he is not getting the right price for his products today.

PITIFUL PLEAS FROM IRELAND URGE RELIEF

Massachusetts Committee Receives Many Letters Telling of Poverty

Many pathetic letters detailing the horrors of poverty and desolation in Ireland are arriving daily at headquarters of the Massachusetts Committee for Relief in Ireland. The names of the writers are withheld, but are on file at the office. The following is a sample:

"No matter what you may hear of the starvation in Ireland only God and those brought up there could ever realize the suffering that the Irish have been called upon to endure. I have been a witness of some of Ireland's sorrow which shall never be blotted from my memory, yet we can bear it with patient resignation. If the people of America could only realize as we do, they would all gladly lend a hand."

Today Rev. Mark E. Madden, rector of St. John's, Canton, sent in a subscription of $514.75 collected from the people in that parish.

At the last regular meeting of the Worcester Independent Employes' Union, Local 17005, Worcester, it was voted to donate a liberal sum to the fund. Mr. Richard F. Comerford sent the amount today to headquarters at No. 166 Devonshire street.

M. W. Twoomey sold official buttons and song books at the convention on February 13, netting for the fund $50, which was received from him.

Contributions should be sent to Jeseph H. Lee, headquarters, No. 166 Devonshire street.

'CLOSING OF FIVE BANKS LITTLE FELT'

No Weakness of General Situation, Declares Reserve Agent Gettemy

C. E. Gettemy of Boston, assistant Federal reserve agent, has given out the following statement relative to the closing of five Boston trust companies:

"The failure of five Boston trust companies during the past six months has caused considerable comment. These trust companies had large savings deposits and handled a character of business peculiar to themselves, and their failure was due to mismanagement and not to any weakness in the general banking or industrial situation. Therefore, their closing was little felt by other institutions."

HOOVER MERGER PLAN HAS DANGERS, SAYS HAPGOOD

By NORMAN HAPGOOD,
Editorial Correspondent of Boston American.

Washington, Feb. 26.—Herbert Hoover has one very big chance that he will try to bring about in the government organization. He wants to have the Shipping Board made a part of the Department of Commerce. Hoover has had a great deal to do with the shipping during the war and since and has become extremely interested in its problems. Indeed, there were even some of his backers who told him they would rather see him at the head of the Shipping Board that at the head of the Department of Commerce.

Norman Hapgood

The Shipping Board has not been a sparkling success, but the plan of putting it under the Department of Commerce has the drawback that would open the door to other moves against boards that it is desired to draw the teeth of.

For example, there is on foot a move to put the Federal Trade Commission in the Interior Department, but it is a move by those who wish to render it innocuous. Of course the Shipping Board is not a board enforcing political principles, like the Federal Trade Commission and the Federal Reserve Board, so the step might be taken in the one case without being taken in the others, but there would be alarm among some of those who feel strongly the need of independence in the boards.

My statement about the relations that Hughes and Hoover would have to each other in the Cabinet, if Hoover went in, has been borne out by something I did not know at the time I expressed that opinion.

Mr. Harding, it seems, some time ago said to a friend that the Secretary of State and Commerce ought to be men who could work well together. At the same time he expressed much enthusiasm over the possibilities of building up the foreign commerce of the United States.

Denby's Record Shows 'im Stand Patter

In estimating the forces that will all in different directions in the Cabinet it will be necessary to put Mr. Denby, if he goes in, among those who naturally incline to keep in step with the party organisation rather than with such influences as Hughes and Hoover. His record as a Congressman indicates that.

I remember vividly how pat he stood as a member of the joint committee that looked into the conduct of the Interior Department under Richard Achilles Ballinger. The first intention, it will be recalled, was to appoint a committee made up for the express purpose of exonerating Ballinger. Vice-President Sherman was counted on to name a perfectly safe bunch from the Senate and Uncle Joe Cannon to do the same from the House.

Uncle Joe struck a snag, however. The group of Republican insurgents broke away from him and took the choice of members out of his hands. The result was that instead of a packed committee there emerged one in which the majority, to be sure, was determined to support the Administration, whatever the evidence, but the minority was strong enough the real evidence could be put in, and was put in with killing effect by Mr. Brandeis. Mr. Denby went, through those months of gruelling experience without once causing a vote that was not exactly the vote planned by the party machine.

He is a popular man, may do his work well, but it is clear that he will stand without hitching.

Placing Root Is Harding's Next Problem

While the expression "the best minds," has become a topic for jesting in these parts it really represents the earnest efforts of a modest man to transcend the mental limitations of his party machine while remaining in harmony with it.

Of course, Republicans in general long ago decided Mr. Root as the prize "best mind," and Mr. Harding has been put to it to know what to do with him.

So many of the largest questions facing us have to do in one way or other with what is going on in the British Empire that many think London the place for Mr. Root. It is assumed that if he were there American interests would be skillfully attended to.

There are two obstacles. Apparently George Harvey feels that his services entitle him to that reward, and Mr. Harding is not inclined to get into the same trouble with the editor that Mr. Wilson got into.

Even if Harvey could be satisfied in some other way, however, it is not certain that Mr. Root would go. His wife would be unable to undertake the social work, which would have to fall on his daughter-in-law. Governor Lowden would also be welcomed for this task if he would accept it and if the Harvey difficulty were out of the way.

The most probable way of using Mr. Root is as chairman of a special commission to study our relations to Europe and work out a plan. Mr. Harding is convinced of the need of such a commission. He thinks also of putting Mr. Taft on it, and not improbably General Wood on the ground that military aspects will have to be considered.

MARTENS' DEPORTATION ORDER WAS CANCELLED

New York, Feb. 26.—A peculiar development in the deportation of Ludwig Martens, Russian Soviet "ambassador," and his secretary, Gregory Weinstein, and other members of his "ambassadorial suite," came today when Charles Recht, counsel for Martens, made public a telegram from the Department of Labor at Washington which cancelled warrants for such arrest and deportation. Martens, however, already has arrived in Russia.

THINKS CANADA WILL LEAD U. S. INTO LEAGUE

Saskatoon, Can., Feb. 26, — "Canada's greatest rule is that of interpreter of the British empire to the United States," declared N. W. Rowell, former president of the Privy Council of Canada, in an address at the University of Saskatchewan. "I believe that Canada will yet lead the United States into the League of Nations."

TO FORCE BROOKLYN BARS OUT OF BUSINESS

New York, Feb. 26.—A new kink in the prohibition enforcement program for Brooklyn threw a stiff scare into hotels and barg today. NECESSARIES OF LIFE BOARD IN DANGER

To Go Out of Existence Unless Legislature Acts Before Next Friday

The Commission on the Necessaries of Life, the only State agency having any power to combat the high cost of living, will pass out of existence Thursday night unless strenuous efforts to save it are made by the Legislature in the next four days.

Although Governor Cox has been informed that the legislative Committee on Mercantile Affairs voted a couple of weeks ago to report out a bill to save the commission, the bill found its way into the House only Friday afternoon, after the Legislature had adjourned until Monday afternoon.

Reports that some of the interests, including alleged rent profiteers, that have been held up by the commission to public view are attempting secretly to kill off the commission were in circulation.

Only four working days are left in the Legislature to save the commission from extinction and in that time the bill must pass two more committees of the Legislature and four stages in each house and Senate. All legislative rules will have to be suspended in order to pass such a bill.

A bill to continue the life of the commission for two years and to combine with it all the powers of the Fuel Administration was filed with the Legislature by the Gifted Improvement Association and was referred to the Mercantile Affairs Committee on January 20. The hearing on the bill was February 8. It is the opinion of members of the Legislature which supplied the legislative machinery necessary, to continue the commission in existence.

Reports that the Legislature was idling while the commission was fast approaching its end reached Governor Cox's ear. He sent for members of the committee and received assurance from them that the necessary legislation would be reported.

In its new form, the bill authorizes the Governor to continue the commission from time to time.

Governor Cox has again interested himself in the situation and has received renewed assurance that the Legislature will go through.

If the commission is allowed to expire, the local rent and housing committees will be useless, as they are without power to summons witnesses.

WOMAN KILLED, 10 HURT IN 3 NEW YORK FIRES

New York, Feb. 26.—One woman was killed, a man and a boy were probably fatally hurt and eight other persons were badly burned in three fires early today. The dead woman is Mrs. Mary Dowd, who was cremated in a fire in the tenement house at No. 1134 First avenue. The most spectacular fire was at No. 171 Union street, where a woman leaped from a window and saved her life by landing upon her husband, who was standing in the street beneath the window.

QUICK RELIEF FROM CONSTIPATION

Get Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

That is the joyful cry of thousands since Dr. Edwards produced Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel.

Dr. Edwards, a practicing physician for 17 years and a chemist, a life-time enemy, discovered the formula for Olive Tablets while treating patients for chronic constipation and torpid livers. Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets do not contain calomel, but a healing, soothing vegetable laxative.

No griping is the "keynote" of these little olive-colored, olive-colored tablets. They cause the bowels and liver to act normally. They never force them to unnatural action.

If you have a "dark brown mouth"—bad breath—a dull, tired feeling—sick headache—torpid liver—constipation, you'll find quick, sure and pleasant results from one or two of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets at bedtime.

Thousands take them every night just to keep right. Try them. 15c and 30c.

APHRODITE COMING TO OPERA

There are more great names associated with the production of "Aphrodite" than with any dramatic production for many years. Artistically it has won more praise in New York and Chicago than it would seem possible for one piece to achieve.

The novel "Aphrodite" was written some twenty years ago by Pierre Louys, one of the greatest of French writers of prose. He composed also in verse "Les Chansons de Bilitis."

Percy Anderson of London, the famous artist, who is now seventy-two years old, designed all the 500 costumes used in the play. Michel Fokine, the inventor of the Ballet Russe, arranged the great ballet for the Festival scene. Pehrier, composer of Monna Vanna, is the author of most of the incidental music. E. Lyal Swete, the great English producer, put the show on, but during the last fortnight David Belasco had the supreme direction.

There is considerable nudeness in "Aphrodite," but no vulgarity, no obscenity, no crass indecency. A person who visits the Art Museum, reads Greek mythology, and Swinburne will not catch cold or anything else at "Aphrodite."

It would be a great misfortune if Boston were denied the opportunity to view what has been declared by critics everywhere as the greatest spectacular drama ever produced anywhere.

Old Abe Dropped His H's.

There has been so much stress laid upon the fact that "Abraham Lincoln" was written by an Englishman, and ran a year in London before it came to America that you cannot blame people who haven't seen the show for supposing that it is being presented in the country to an English troupe. How anybody could see the play, hear the actors, and still have such an illusion is mystery, but they seem to have it.

It is true that John Drinkwater, an Englishman, wrote the play, and that it ran in London and was performed there by a troupe who gave satisfaction to the British public. But anybody who imagines that British actors can park their British accents and mannerisms at will credits them with a versatility that they do not deserve.

If William Harris, Jr., had brought over the London company to play American historical characters the way they played them in London, "Abraham Lincoln" would have run for one night only, and the audience would have laughed itself into hysterics.

I once saw "Potash and Perlmutter" played in London, with an all-British company. The Englishmen made no attempt to imitate the East Side New York accent. Potash and Perlmutter became lisping London Jews, while Piccadilly types replaced the New York characters in the play. And Lo—the howling success!

No, indeed, William Harris did not bring over any of the English company to play "Abraham Lincoln" except as it was the British person was ready at the special hour in front of the curtain, before and after each act, in a highly unintelligible manner.

Frank McGlynn, who plays Lincoln, is a Californian of Scottish ancestry. His father was a Californian before him, and still lives in San Francisco at a great age; and all the other actors are "real" Yanks.

Harris realized fully that in the role of Lincoln he must have a star, so he could not afford to make any error as to the actor's manners and the atmosphere of the Civil War.

Australia saw Her First.

Ula Sharon, the attractive little dancer in "Broadway Brevities" is just over sixteen years old. The proficiency of the world famous Pavlowa technique are explained by the fact that she has been dancing since she was "knee high."

Miss Sharon was born in Kansas, daughter of a civil engineer whose work took him through the Far East and to Australia. Child labor laws which prevail in so many States prevented Miss Sharon from coming to America earlier, but upon the Australian continent she is one of the most famous of dancers.

So here is a product of an American dancer who is compelled to win her laurels in a foreign country before she can make her debut in her own.

Fashion Note.

"Honors Are Even" has the distinction of possession a woman press agent, and you just can't keep that sex from getting in their fine work when they are sending items to a masculine editor. It seems that Miss Lola Fisher has designed a dress for her little self and found somebody here in Boston to make it, quite a feat from the point of view of a New York actress. And as you are probably burning up with curiosity to know what the dress looks like, here is a vivid description.

It is a deft confatwer that is blue taffeta (note, kind of silk) made with the old-fashioned tight pointed waist and full skirt of your grandmother's time. The skirt is escalloped at the bottom and piped (definition unknown) with apple green taffeta. The bodice closes with cunning little bows of the green taffeta with long floating ends. The sleeves are puffed in Kate Greenaway style (page Kate) and piped with the green and scallops (new use for scallops). Neck and sleeves are finished with frills of dainty old-fashioned lace.

How's that for heigh?

Oh, by the way, Bill Courtenay has had a pair of pants designed with quart-sized hip pockets—but let us not go into that—or those.

"Love Nest" Beats "Poor Butterfly."

"The public and not the author makes a 'song hit,'" said George M. Cohan, who has many big successes to his credit. "We may think we can pick them in advance, and sometimes we have, but just as often we don't. Nobody expected 'The Love Nest,' the recognized song hit of Marie Cahill's big show, but nobody ever thought we expected 'Poor Butterfly' to knock all records for a row and 'Poor Butterfly' was slated for the discard when Charles Dillingham, manager of the Hippodrome, suggested in his musical director that he thought it would be better if placed as a fox trot. The tempo was changed and that made the song."

The music publishing world at the present time is simply bewildered over the amazing sales of "The Love Nest." It is the most popular song of the year. It has broken all records so far as its sales are concerned, having passed the 800,000 mark in the first few months of its existence, eclipsing the sales of "Poor Butterfly" for a similar period of time by at least 300,000. Consequently it has broken all royalty records. Jean Hirsch, who wrote the music, and Otto Harbach, who is responsible for the lyrics, have already received over $50,000 between them and there is every indication that they will collect as much more before the popularity of "The Love Nest" wanes. When one considers that the wholesale price of the song is about 23 cents a copy it will be seen that its popularity means a good sized fortune for Hirsch and Harbach. George M. Cohan, unlike some of the other grasping producers, does not touch one penny of these royalties. Nine out of ten of the producers declare themselves in on every song hit, but not so with Cohan. He is satisfied with making his out of the profits, and thereby encouraging the writers in their work.

Uncle Tom Makes Hit.

When they put "Uncle Tom's Cabin" on at the Arlington for a week, the wise theatrical men laughed and said, "Nobody wants to see that thing at this late day." Don't they. The Arlington company did an enormous business with Uncle Tom and Little Eva that the thaw last week is generally attributed to the two weeks' rest vouchsafed at the Arlington. Anyway, they are holding the good old show over for another week.

More Old Stuff.

And down at the Globe Theatre, the merry musical melange, "It's Up to You," gives place to another ancient and honorable yesterday of the theatre, "The Old Homestead."

Delman Thompson played Uncle Josh for thirty years or more and he has been dead nearly a decade. Nevertheless, "The Old Homestead" goes on without interruption. William Lawrence who plays Uncle Josh nowadays, and Thompson, who played him, can hardly tell them apart. In the old day when Thompson was very feeble, he was wheeled on and rolled off after an act or two, give way to Lawrence. The audience never knew the difference. And many a night old Delman never started at all. In one way or another Thompson has already played the part 3,000 times, which is equivalent to every night for nine years.

That Snowball Fight.

There is something about throwing snowballs which is irresistible, and the snowball battle between the actors and the audience at the conclusion of "Jim Jam Jems" becomes a really animated contest before the asbestos curtain separates the contestants.

Tossing missiles of one sort or another into the audience is an old trick, but I do not remember snowballs. Jim Jam Jems girls use downy balls of cotton wool, which rebound from "mother's" bosom without injury and without leaving any dent, while little Eddie Cole is the only man in the company to participate with some college youths who visit the Wilbur regularly.

Hats Off to Al.

I desire to make my most humble apologies to Mr. A. H. Woods. I was wrong. I eat my words. In this column last week I said he didn't have the effrontery to send out a farce bearing the title "Getting Gertie's Garter," and had changed its name to "Up in a Hay Mow."

Mr. Woods has got the effrontery I said he hadn't. He has demonstrated it by changing the name of "Up in a Hay Mow" back to "Getting Gertie's Garter," and he promises to bring it into Boston to the Plymouth theatre week after next.

However, if anybody really gets Gertie's garter in the play, maybe Superintendent Crowley will get Al Woods.

BOSTON OPERA HOUSE

A sumptuous orgy of color and beauty which fairly makes the spectator gasp and thrill under the spell of its bewildering splendor is "Aphrodite," the mammoth spectacle which Ray Comstock and Morris Gest will present at the Boston Opera House for two weeks beginning Monday night next. Never in the history of the modern stage of dazzling effects being scored the sensational triumph that was registered by this gorgeous spectacle at the Century Theatre, New York, last Winter, and this season in four new scenes and in costume been established in every city visited.

"Aphrodite" is a staging on a colossal scale of the glories of ancient Egypt, employing 350 people in the production complete. The list of names associated with its authorship and preparation reads like a "Who's Who" of theatrical fame. Percy Anderson of London, the famous artist, who is now seventy-two years of age, and who suffered from shell shock while sketching at the front during the war designed all the eight hundred costumes in this play. His original sketches have been faithfully copied in America by Carl Link, the artist whose similar sketches for "Chu Chin Chow" have been widely published in America. Perhaps the most effective of the Percy Anderson designs are those of the Bacchanalian procession, which show the various characters on their way to a feast in ancient Alexandria. The ballet, staged by Michel Fokine, the famous Russian master of the dance and creator of the Russian ballet, is probably the most gorgeous picture of stage coloring ever seen in this country.

KEITH'S THEATRE

Nat Nazarro, Jr., the sensational singer and dancer, with his selected assistants and charming Viola May will lead the bill at Keith's Theatre the coming week. Homer B. Mason and Marguerite Kebler will follow according to the billing, and the popular team will offer "Oh," by Porter Emerson Brown. It is a farcical improbability.

Julius Tannen, the famous monologist, will offer "The Chatterbox," speaking the public mind. Fern and Marie will give a vaudeville diversion of singing, dancing and travesty. Fink's circus mules is a comedy offering as an equine joy fest that beats them all. Evens and Peres will be in a novelty offering. Burns and Lorraine are Southern syncopaters. Emile and John Nathane will do daring feats, Kinograms and Topics of the Day will be shown on the screen.

SCANDALS OF 1920

George White's second annual revue, the "Scandals of 1920," comes to the Colonial Theatre commencing Monday, March 14. The promise is made that Mr. White in his new Scandals will be quite outdone the effort of last season. Little Ann Pennington again heads the cast and there have been no changes among the principals since the "Scandals" appeared at the Globe Theatre, New York city, last summer. In addition to "Penny," the leading members of the company are: La Sylphe, Ethel Delmar, Frances Arms, Christine Welford, Myra Cullen, Darry Welford, Sascha Beaumont, Lou Hirsch, Lester Allen, George Blekel, James Miller, Lloyd Garver, Lester O'Keefe, George Rockwell, Al Fox and George White himself.

GREENWICH VILLAGE FOLLIES

The Greenwich Village Follies, 1920, has been described as gorgeous in color, costumes and girls. It comes to the Shubert Theatre for a four weeks' engagement, beginning Monday, March 7. The entire production was devised and staged by John Murray Anderson. Mr. Anderson has created many glittering spectacles, but never with greater forte than in the Greenwich Village Follies, 1920. The dialogue is by Thomas J. Gray, and the lyrics are by John Murray Anderson and Arthur Swanstrom, and the music is by A. Baldwin Sloane.

Two of the principal members of the company are the Parber girls, Constance and Irene. La Sylphe, ethereal and comely being one of the features of this year's production.

Savoy and Brennan give a humorous touch to this revusical comedy, and Hanford and Myers enliven the performance by playing on a saw. Frank Crumit has some new songs which he sings with his always alluring comedy. Perhaps the most unusual novelty seen on the stage for many seasons are the masks made by W. V. Benda, and worn by Miss Margaret Severn, in a series of dances she gives while wearing the masks.

GAYETY THEATRE

The clientele of the Gayety have a treat in store for them when Barney Gerard's "Girls de Looks," which last season was conceded to be the funniest on the circuit, comes here on Monday.

There is more than one reason why this may be called a treat. The announcement will be warmly received, as it serves to bring back those well known comedians, Joseph K. Watson and Will H. Cohan, in the furiously funny characters of Silkin and Zelkin. When seen here last they were "refined lawyers" and now they are "bankers and brokers."

The new vehicle was written by Barney Gerard and Joseph K. Watson. It is brimful of bright and witty lines, funny situations, and interspersed with a number of exclusive musical numbers that are of the whistly, jingly sort.

Mr. Gerard has engaged an excellent cast, including Anna Propp, Betty Evans, A Hawaiian Duo Kae and Kalama, Sam Green, George Stone, Fred Evans, Jack Thomas, and a chorus of twenty beautiful girls, all under twenty.

ARLINGTON THEATRE

The Arlington Players at the Arlington Theatre will be seen Monday night in "Freckles," a stage adaption of Mrs. Gene Stratton Porter's novel of the great Limberlost swamp region of Indiana. The dramatization was made by Nell Toomey and closely follows Mrs. Porter's original novel, preserving all the charm of that widely sold book.

No characters in modern fiction or on the stage can equal those of "Freckles" and his sweetheart, "The Swamp Angel." Their simple nobility and wonderful sweetness. A love story of real sentiment, this play is also a story of intrigue and adventure.

It deals with a bright, lovable, Irish youth, "Freckles," who has but one hand. An orphan, driven into the Limberlost region, that is, into the logging country of Northern Michigan, he secures a position as guard for a lumber corporation. His fight with lumber thieves, his love for the daughter of his wealthy employer, an accident in which he is seriously injured, his return to strength and health under the nursing of his sweetheart, and the discovery that he is heir to a large sum of money, are among the thrilling incidents of this unusual drama.

LOEW'S ORPHEUM THEATRE

A program of unusual appeal is offered for the coming week at Loew's Orpheum Theatre, and the vaudeville will be headed by Neal Burns & Co. in a spectacular character classic, "The Rounder of Old Broadway," and this popular favorite never fails to win the approval of his audiences. Jack and the popular Boston favorites Lane and Smith, will offer their comedy laugh bit, "The Split," from the pen of Andy Rice. Other acts will include Rolls and Royce, the variable pair, in "Treat 'Em Rough;" the three Wilson girls, in a rose bower of melodies and dances; three Kanazawa boys in a superlative degree of Japanese dexterity; and a novelty singing and dancing skit. Ethel Clayton will be shown in her latest photoplay production, "The Price of Possession," in which she has a role that is said to surpass anything in which she has ever appeared. For the closing half of the week Thomas Meighan will be seen in "The Easy Road," in addition to a new vaudeville program. The usual Sunday concerts of vaudeville and photoplays will be in order.

TREMONT THEATRE

David Belasco will present the new comedy by Jean Archibald, "Call the Doctor," at the Tremont Theatre for a limited engagement beginning Monday, March 14. Mr. Belasco, following his usual custom, will present in Boston the entire original cast which appeared in the comedy during its twenty-one weeks at the Empire Theatre, New York. Included in the company are Charlotte Walker, Janet Beecher, William Morris, Philip Merivale, John Amory, Jane Houston, Fania Marinoff, Mrs. Tom Wise, Barbara Milton and Rea Martin.

"GETTING GERTIE'S GARTER"

"Getting Gertie's Garter" is the title of a new A. H. Woods farce which will be presented at the Plymouth Theatre on Monday evening, March 7. The new piece is in three acts and is the work of Wilson Collison, coauthor of "Up in Mabel's Room," and Avery Hopwood, who has been aptly called the godfather of contemporary American farce. Hazel Dawn and Walter Jones will be the principal supports of the garter. They will be surrounded in the chase for the elusive elastic by Dorothy Mackaye, Donald MacDonald, Lotrin Baker, Louis Kimball, Eleanor Dawn, and Adele Rolland.

PAVLOWA

In three farewell appearances to be given in Symphony Hall on Tuesday evening, March 8, and Wednesday afternoon and evening, March 9, Anna Pavlowa, great Russian dancer, and her company will appear.

PEOPLE'S ORCHESTRA

The People's Symphony Orchestra, Mr. Mollenhauer, conductor, will give its fourteenth concert Sunday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock in Convention Hall. An interesting program has been arranged, consisting entirely of music by American composers, viz: Gilbert, Henry Hadley, Foote, Chadwick and MacDowell, all of whom are or have at some time been Bostonians.

BOSTON THEATRE

Vera Gordon, famous Mother in Humoresque, who appeared in Boston a few weeks ago at Keith's Theatre, is the star in "The Greatest Love" feature photoplay at the Boston Theatre the coming week. This photoplay is a remarkable one and fun shows the real hope of mankind. The vaudeville bill includes James F. Kelly and Emma Pollock, international favorites in "Past and Present," Sharkey, Roth and Witt in a triple alliance will offer song, music and

GLANCES AT NEW FILM PICTURES

Pola Negri, the really wonderful emotional actress who is appearing in the photoplay, "Passion," at the Tremont, is one of the most interesting personalities on the screen, the more so as the details regarding her are meager. She is supposed to be of Polish or Czech origin, and she began her public career playing the violin, actually making concert appearances as a soloist in parts of Germany and Central Europe.

A ballet master became interested in her and persuaded her to drop the violin for dancing. The young woman was a proficient pupil and in two or three years reappeared in public, this time as a premiere danseuse at the Opera of Vienna. She is said to have danced in London, Paris, Berlin and Petrograd.

Next she appeared in small parts in a musical comedy, later she was acting in a dramatic company in Prague. Finally her extraordinarily mobile countenance, her really great beauty drew her into the films, and "Passion" is the first of her film productions to reach the American market.

"Kismet" Cost Half Million.

The cost of making the production of "Kismet" was enormous, going well over the half million mark. The scenes of the old Turkish city of Bagdad are perfectly presented and carry an atmosphere that transports the audience from the theatre to the Orient. The desert scenes with the picturesque Arabs and their fleet steeds are superb. All of the interior scenes with their magnificent tapestries and hangings are true in every detail that goes with Oriental splendor.

For three seasons Otis Skinner, on the stage, played the role of Hajj the Beggar and it was agreed among the critics that his interpretation of this picturesque character was perfect and the best work of his career. Edward Knoblock, the author of "Kismet," declared that Mr. Skinner's wonderful art had made a great change for the better in the character, as he, Knoblock, had first visualized it. In the picture Mr. Skinner is at his best. It is impossible to cheat the camera. The most minute detail is registered. If Mr. Skinner moves, every feature or facial contortion throughout his performance it is not noticeable. So clever is his work that the individual feels refreshed mentally and physically after having seen it.

The cast supporting Mr. Skinner is a long and notable one and contains names of many stage and screen favorites.

The Real Way to Vamp.

All the accepted rules for plain and fancy "vamping," as practised on the screen, were learned by Alice Lake has her way.

For Alice is convinced that no man in real life ever would be won if the girl depended on the bag of tricks played by some screen "vamps."

"Who ever heard of a man being won in real life by the long, languid, eyed methods of the professional siren vampire?" asked Alice. "I can't imagine what sort of a man would permit himself to be led from the path of right and narrow by a woman who curls her arms in the air, twines herself about him and makes hypnotic eyes at him.

"I can see no reason why it should be necessary to do things so differently before the camera. Love would be done in real life.

"Right there I think many people refuse to see is that extravagant movements, gestures and highly emotional scenes are not necessary to the standpoint of the picture-goer.

"Real thought and study of one's part is the chief requisite for success on the screen. I can remember three early interviews in which the most successful stars were those who threw themselves about with the greatest abandon. It is interesting to note that those who have continued such methods—who haven't moved forward with the development of pictures—no longer are successful.

A Lugubrious Comedian.

The tantalizing call of the witching white lights and the lure of the piquant faces of the well-known cabarets and resorts find no response from Buster Keaton, the sad-faced comedian whose latest picture, "The Haunted House," comes to the Park Theatre Monday for one week.

Buster is a hard-working comedian who attends strictly to business, and that business, the successor of Fatty Arbuckle declares, is to think up new and more attractive ways of making people laugh at his expense. Perhaps one reason why Buster Keaton has become nationally famous as the comedian who never smiles, or rarely he finds the funny business such serious business that it is no laughing matter.

After putting in a number of hours trying out side-splitting stunts which, when they are put on the screen cause the beholders roar their approval, Buster finds the lure and excitement of the average white light resort considerably lacking in pep.

With Alice Lake, Buster plays and directs his own comedies. Throughout the day he works at his studio in Hollywood. When the day's work is over he either takes a swing at the club or indulges in an always active game of baseball, then has a quiet dinner and heads for home. Besides his acting and directing, he writes all his future comedies. So with this active schedule to go through, Buster decided that there was little time left for the sports that accompany the much advertised white lights.

"EARTHBOUND"

The many readers of Basil King's various stories and articles will be interested in the announcement that "Earthbound," based upon Mr. King's novel, "A Ghost Story," will be presented in photoplay form at the Majestic Theatre for an indefinite engagement starting Monday, March 7. Advance reports indicate that "Earthbound," which ventures into a line beyond the veil, will be a unique production. An unusually elaborate presentation and an atmospheric prologue will accompany its exhibition at the Majestic.

GORDON'S CAMBRIDGE, CENTRAL SQ.

The development of a crude Indian maiden, married for spite by the dissolute son of an aristocratic British family, into a beautiful, cultured woman forms the theme of "Behold My Wife!" the feature photoplay coming to Gordon's Cambridge Central Square Theatre Monday, February 28. The scenes are laid for the most part in the rugged Canadian Northwest, and the story is declared to be as strong as the scenery. The Olympia Weekly, a new screen picture of five acts of vaudeville, including DeVoe and Statzer, novelty entertainers; Reed and Lucy, songs and piano; Emmett Driscoll, eccentric dancer; Evelyn Ward and Walter Cushing in a comedy sketch, "Front"; Rappo, sensational violinist, and Arnold and Lambert in a comedy skit entitled "Pills," complete the bill.

MODERN AND BEACON

Breathing the amusingly strong spirit of its original, the sense of the people acting their little puppet play here below, that is "Without Limit," the feature of the triple offering at the Modern and Beacon Theatres next week.

This is a picturization of the short story magazine writer Irvin Johnson, which appeared in The Saturday Evening Post. All who have read the story will remember vividly their impression of the forlorn girl; Palter, the old invasive gambler with his curse upon his head, who curls her arms in the air, twines herself about him and makes hypnotic eyes at him.

"I can see no reason why it should be necessary to do things so differently before the camera. Love would be done in real life.

"Right there I think many people refuse to see is that extravagant movements, gestures and highly emotional scenes are not necessary to the standpoint of the picture-goer.

When the day's work is over he either takes a swing at the club or indulges in an always active game of baseball, then has a quiet dinner and heads for home. Besides his acting and directing, he writes all his future comedies. So with this active schedule to go through, Buster decided that there was little time left for the sports that accompany the much advertised white lights.

"EARTHBOUND"

The many readers of Basil King's various stories and articles will be interested in the announcement that "Earthbound," based upon Mr. King's novel, "A Ghost Story," will be presented in photoplay form at the Majestic Theatre for an indefinite engagement starting Monday, March 7. Advance reports indicate that "Earthbound," which ventures into a line beyond the veil, will be a unique production. An unusually elaborate presentation and an atmospheric prologue will accompany its exhibition at the Majestic.

GORDON'S CAMBRIDGE, CENTRAL SQ.

The development of a crude Indian maiden, married for spite by the dissolute son of an aristocratic British family, into a beautiful, cultured woman forms the theme of "Behold My Wife!" the feature photoplay coming to Gordon's Cambridge Central Square Theatre Monday, February 28. The scenes are laid for the most part conventional lines of the persecuted heroine, the villain and the rescuing hero.

"PASSION"

"Passion," starring Pola Negri, the famous continental beauty, is the attraction at the Tremont Theatre for the coming week.

This magnificent photo-drama was shown for the first time in Boston at the Tremont Theatre last Monday night and it received an ovation. Enthusiastic audiences have filled the theatre at each performance, matinee and evening. Applause of praise throughout Greater Boston declare the screen play is the biggest and most compelling of all film dramas ever seen in Boston.

GORDON'S OLYMPIA

Few screen productions have offered photoplay lovers the remarkable Northland scenes which are the settings for the story related in James Oliver Curwood's "Isobel; or the Fall's Bind," which is the screen play at Gordon's Olympia beginning Monday. This production, adapted from Curwood's novel of the Great North, and starring House Peters and Jane Novak, has been heralded in all sections of the country as one of the most compelling love stories ever related on the screen.

GAYETY

It is many years since Joseph K. Watson and Will H. Cohan entered the burlesque field, and it necessitated considerable time and money for Barney Gerard to persuade them to return to it this season. Their contracts expired and Watson's services were sought by a number of Broadway producers, one of whom wanted him for the stage version of "Abe Rabbible," the cartoons appearing in the Hearst publications. Gerard overbid the competing managers and annexed the comedians for two more years, during which they will continue with Barney Gerard's "Girls-de-Looks" which is the present attraction at the Gayety next week.

WALDRON'S CASINO

The joy bells of the world of amusement will ring out when Arthur Pearson's new, smart and up-to-date "Vodvil Puff Revue" comes to town on Monday at Waldron's Casino for the first time in this city. Two of the funniest of the many burlesques the country has got of excellent players. They are Jack Pearl, recently the star of "The Beauty Trust," and Jamie Coughlin, formerly with Arthur Pearson's "Girls a la Carte." Gladdie Riley, one of the most skilled singers of the modern stage, is the prima donna and will, among her other offerings, sing some of her delightful negro melodies. Leona Earl and Florence Talbot are already famous in burlesque for their personal attractiveness and real talents, and with them in a series of brilliant specialties and dancing numbers will be Ben Bard, the leading juvenile of the Columbia circuit; and Jed Gross.

SOMERVILLE THEATRE

"Smilin' Through," Allan Langdon Martin's fantastic comedy, which has scored a hit from coast to coast with Jane Cowl in the dual role of Moonyeen Clavie and Kathleen Dunnannon, is the attraction announced for the coming week at the Somerville Theatre. Never has a more delightful play been produced on the American stage, and the theme will take you to realms beyond and swift return to the present day where all American plays. The story deals with the romance of yesteryear, and its people are dressed in the quaint old-fashioned hoop-skirted frocks and the quaintest arts of the Civil War times, and then it swiftly moves to the modern girls and the effect of the early-day romance is clearly shown on Kathleen Dunnannon of today.

LOEW'S COLUMBIA THEATRE

A capital program is scheduled for the initial half of the week at Loew's Columbia Theatre, Washington and Mott streets, with four acts of splendid vaudeville entertainment, and the showing of "someone in the House" with an all-star cast, and Bert Lytell in that gripping melodramatic mystery play, "Alias Jimmy Valentine." For the closing half of the week Fatty Arbuckle will be shown in "The Roundup."

TAXI 'MONOPOLY' DENOUNCED BY ATTY. WEBBER

"Public Streets Sold to Private Interests," Says Counsel for Independents

The following statement is sent to the Boston American by A. C. Webber, former assistant district attorney of Suffolk County. Webber represents the $500 and more independent taxicab owners of Boston who are trying to obtain changes in the police regulations relating to cabs privately owned and owned by companies:

"That the public streets are sold to private interests is clearly apparent," says Webber.

His complete letter follows:

"At present about 500 independent taxi owners own their own little taxicabs and depend entirely upon the earnings as the means of livelihood for themselves and family. They are all licensed, after investigation, by the police commissioner.

At present most of the taxicab business is derived from private stands which are located at the railroad stations, steamships, hotels, large public buildings and clubs.

"These private stands are exclusive; that is, only the persons to whom they are granted have a right to use them. All others must keep off or else they are liable to punishment by fine and loss of license under the rule of the Police Commissioner of the City of Boston, Regulation 11, Rule 84.

FEW PUBLIC STANDS.

"These private stands control roughly about 90 per cent. of all the taxi business in the city of Boston.

"These private stands are principally in the hands of five or six companies.

"It appears that these private stands are granted by the commissioner only to those who are acceptable to companies and hotels that own the land adjoining the private stands.

"The private stands are all situated in the public streets and provide for the use of the streets for the standing of a certain number of vehicles, according to the police commissioner's determination.

"These private stands are very few in number and practically worthless from the taxi standpoint. Upon these are 500 independent owners who must rely for their business or rove around the streets, creating a little business here and there, when the opportunity presents itself, from the private stands.

"A very small part of the taxi business originates directly from the hotel, station or club, as the case may be. Most of it, estimated at at least 75 per cent, comes from the vicinity

SELLING PUBLIC STREETS.

"The private stands pay nothing to the city for the use of these public streets, but they pay a percentage of their gross receipts to the hotels or others in whose property the adjoining property to the street.

"That this is selling the public streets to private interests is clearly apparent; for example, in the case of the Hotel Thorndike, which is no longer a hotel, but an office building in the course of construction, and from which a taxi stand has come to a considerable time, a taxi company is obliged to pay the owners of the Thorndike Building for the use and sale of the public street immediately in front of the building.

"That at both the South Station, one of the largest in the world, only two taxi stands have been established, and there are no public stands—the railroad receiving pay from the two taxi stands for the use of the use of the public streets in front of the station—and other independent taxi drivers are forbidden to take any business from the station.

LAND OWNERS PROFIT.

"It has been roughly estimated that at least $50,000 has been taken from the taxi companies yearly by the land owners for the use of the streets, although Representative Benjamin C. Lane thinks the amount very much larger.

"Last Spring the taxicab companies made a complaint that they could not make ends meet, as result, the taxi rates of the city of Boston were increased, so that the public now has to pay the amount lost year and offered for the purpose another company was given the privilege upon a percentage basis, and I have been informed that last year the percentage basis amounted to $16,000. I have endeavored to secure the exact figures from the owners of the Hotel Thorndike, which is no longer a hotel, but the office building in the course of construction, and from which a taxi company

RIVAL COLLEGE TEAMS BATTLE ON ARENA SURFACE TONIGHT

By CHARLES E. PARKER.

Ned Bigelow and his Crimson team mates will go through the motions of playing a hockey game at the Arena tonight, and if the opponents, the Yale sticksters, offer no better opposition than they heretofore have displayed, only the motions and one goal will be necessary for a Harvard victory.

The game is the final contest in the annual Harvard - Yale - Princeton series, and whether Harvard wins—which is very probable—or loses—which is next to impossible, the Crimson will hold the Big Three title for the current season.

However, the fact it is a Harvard-Yale game is sufficient to insure a big gathering of those of Harvard or Yale sympathies, and with rival cheering sections working overtime the event should prove colorful notwithstanding its probable one-sidedness.

Yale's only previous appearance at the new Arena came in its recent contest with Princeton. Six-men teams were employed in that game and Yale was gratefully outplayed and soundly defeated. Tonight seven-men teams will be used and it is possible Harvard may have to rely on a substitute goal tender, and in consequence Yale's chances of making a real showing may be slightly improved.

Boston College Takes Series With Tech

Despite the absence of Captain Leo Hughes from its lineup, the Boston College sextet ran roughshod over Tech in the final and deciding game of their series, and annexed the victory and with it the dual trophy by the score of 5 to 1.

In every position but goal B. C. showed to the front, and that it was such was not the case in the goal position was due to the lack of opportunity given Luke Urban to tie the efforts of his rival. George Curry, who assumed Hughes' position at center, proved a most able substitute. It was his carrying of the puck and passing that led to two of the B. C. points, and his checking-back was equally effective. Ben Healy was the high scorer of the evening, netting three of the five B. C. tallies, while Ed Crotty supplied the remaining two. Delaney, on a pass from MacNeil, scored Tech's lone marker.

Report Skilton in Canada on Dufresne Case

According to reports circulated about the Arena, Raymie Skilton is in Canada, playing his last card on the Dufresne case.

Considerable doubt prevails as to his ability to clear up the matter with Canadian officials, but such a scheme of action was and has been the only possible method by which he could legitimately gain the services of the Canadian star for the Shoe Trades team.

May Form All-Star Team for Future Games

Unless the situation involving the Shoe Trades team is promptly cleared up an all star team composed of Greater Boston college players and such members of the Shoe Trades array as can be cleared of the suspension under which they now are held may be formed for the purpose of furnishing an opponent other than the B. A. A. for the Canadian teams, which are scheduled to come to Boston next week and the week following.

Efforts are being made by those interested in the project to keep Harvard, Boston College and Tech players in condition to assume positions on such a team, and it is expected that from their number a remarkably fast and able organization may be formed.

DARTMOUTH IS FAVORITE IN BIG MEET

Track Stars Favor Harvard, Cornell and Hanover in Clash Here Today

One of the best college track meets of the indoor season is staged in Mechanics' Building this afternoon when Harvard, Dartmouth and Cornell line up in a triangular meet.

If Dartmouth's three outstanding stars, Captain Karl Thompson, John A. Shelburne and Arthur Coakley, are up to form, the Green stands a fine chance of taking the cup back to Hanover for the second successive year.

Little is known of Cornell's strength but Jack Moakley can be relied upon to bring a set of athletes here that are liable to spring a surprise in any event and perhaps win the meet.

Bill Bingham, the Harvard coach, has trained his men to do their best against the favorites in every event.

Shelburne, Dartmouth's crack dash man, is bound to have plenty of opposition in the person of Gourdin of Harvard in the struggle for top honors in the 40-yard dash.

Thompson Out to Land New Hurdle Record

Earl Thompson, world's hurdle champion and captain of the big Green team, is expected to be the outstanding star of the meet. Last year in the triangular meet he equalled the world's record of six seconds for the 50-yard hurdles, as for some reason or other, A. A. A. U. overlooked the performance.

Today the star timber-topper is out to lower the present figures and do it in such a manner that the athletic governing body can't fail to notice it.

The real feature, if it is possible for one certain event to be more thrilling than another, will be the mile run. Captain Jerry Desmond, the Crimson track leader, will again face his old rivals, Captain Tom McDermott and R. E. Brown, two of Jack Moakley's favorites.

Last year, the Harvard leader managed to come out on top and win by the slightest margin. Harvard rooters are relying upon Desmond to secure first place for the Crimson.

Arthur Coakley, another star from Hanover, is expected to have an easy time in the 1,000-yard run. An Ithacan, however, may cause the Green star a lot of anxiety.

Wharton of Harvard is conceded the 600-yard run by all except Carter, the international Cornell cross-country man.

CHITTICK KNIGHTS PLAY PERE MARQUETTE

Next Saturday night at the South Boston High School the James J. Chittick Council, K. of C., from Hyde Park will meet Pere Marquette Council in the second game of the series. These teams met a few weeks ago in Hyde Park, the Chittick five winning, by 15 to 12.

NOBLE & GREENOUGH TRIUMPH ON TRACK

Noble & Greenough defeated Browne & Nichols, 39 to 24, in a dual track and field meet at Dexter Field. Captain Jimmy Murphy starred for the winners, taking the dash, hurdles and 600-yard run, and tied Norton of his team for first place in the high jump.

Crescents Carry On

New York, Feb. 26.—The undefeated Crescent Athletic Club basketball team continued its winning streak when it defeated Syracuse, 26 to 17. It was the twenty-ninth consecutive victory of the season for the local boys.

Dan Dowd Wins

Syracuse, N. Y., Feb. 26.—Dan Dowd, Boston heavyweight, although outweighed twenty-five pounds, defeated Al. Benedict of Brooklyn in fifteen rounds here.

Stories of Famous Fights

—Joe Rivers Stops "Kayo" Brown—

This is the forty-first of a series of "Old-Time Fights," written by authorities on pugilism who were famous in their day. Others will follow.

Today we tell you the story of the knockout of Knockout Brown by Joe Rivers in the tenth round of a wicked battle in Los Angeles, February 22, 1913.

By H. M. WALKER.

Little "Kayo" Brown finished flat on his back with his eyes closed and his toes turned to the sky. A lily stuck in his hand would have completed a picture to bring joy to the calloused heart of a Tuscon undertaker.

Joe Rivers, California's best fighting man, did for the New York lightweight in the tenth round of the scheduled twenty-round contest in the Vernon arena of the Pacific Athletic Club. Brown was so clearly out that Referee Eyton did not dignify the final scene by the usual counting-off system.

Early in the tenth Rivers cashed a punch that he already had tried for, and missed, as many as ten or twelve times. As Brown was backing away from a clinch Joseph whipped over a right, snapping the punch like the strike of a rattlesnake. His glove settled under the Broadway boy's chin and backwards flopped Brown, his heels flying in the air.

It Was a Terrible Blow.

It was a terrible blow and would have stopped a less durable man than Brown. With all his arms and legs trembling under his weight, "Kayo" pulled himself to an all-four position and waited while Eyton counted off nine seconds, coming to his feet on "ten" with no more general idea of his whereabouts than that he was located somewhere between San Pedro and Harlem.

Again Rivers proved that he is not the coolest man in the ring. Eager to finish his victim he rushed in and immediately found himself on the floor, the victim of a fusillade of blows. Another right reached Brown's jaw and again he tottered to a kneeling position. This time the beaten boy was so far gone that he didn't take advantage of the count, but staggered to a standing position, a helpless target for the excited Mexican.

A second time Rivers rushed in wild fashion, carrying Brown far across the ring to a neutral corner. The right finally reached the battered Brown's chin and "Kayo" went tumbling to the canvas. Twice he took the count in his corner.

Lifts Brown High Off Floor.

And now Rivers righted himself. While the referee was counting, Joe stepped back and put the wrist rim of his right glove to his teeth, pulling the knuckle covering tight for a finishing smash. As Brown came up on the count of ten, Rivers feinted him until his smeared jaw stood out bare in the sunlight. Another swish of the bronzed arm, a thud as the Californian's fist landed under the ear and Brown was lifted high off his feet, coming to the floor on his back without so much as a quiver of action remaining in his body.

Eyton stepped over for another count, but, seeing at a glance that Brown was "cold," he merely waved toward Rivers in indication that the Atlantic Coast's toughest 133-pounder had failed to find health in California.

Collyer Belt to Decide Mat Championship

A gigantic elimination wrestling tournament for the leading welterweights and middleweights of the east is being planned for Chicago. The winner will be declared the champion of his class and will receive a $1,000 championship belt presented by Bert E. Collyer.

The belt is donated by Mr. Collyer as an incentive for "clean" wrestling and to furnish tangible proof that the wearer is the recognized champion.

Under the conditions of the present system, the wearer would be required to defend it at least once within a year and thus eliminate the risk of the belt now obtains in the middleweight ranks.

The following middleweights, considered the best of their class, will be invited to participate: Johnny Meyers of Chicago and Chris Mercias of Cleveland, O., claimants of the title; Ralph Parrout of Spokane, the fans certain of sport on the "up and up" it is anticipated the tournament will eclipse any similar athletic event ever held in this country.

The following welterweights, considered the best of their class, will be invited to participate: Johnny Meyers of Chicago and Chris Mercias of Cleveland, O., claimants of the title; Ralph Parrout of Spokane; Gene Westergard of New York; Henry Irslinger, champion of England; Walter Klone of Boston; Pinkey Gardiner of Schenectady, N. Y.; Lou Talaber of Iowa, and Mike Yokel of Salt Lake City, Utah.

Jack Reynolds of Cedar Rapids, Ia., the welterweight champion, has consented to defend his title, and the following will be asked to contend with him: Adam Kruger, Lincoln, Neb.; Ius Kallie, InneMapolis; Louis Nelson, Brooklyn; W. Hallas, Canton, O.; Pete Petropolis, former A. E. F. champion, Gary, Ind.; Young Malloost and Young Gotch.

The tournament probably will be held in the Coliseum and will continue a week.

Chris Jordan, who claims the middleweight title by virtue of a recent victory over Waino Ketonen and by wins over many others, has promised a check for $100 with this publication to be given to charity when Johnny Meyers, the claimant, goes on the mat with him. Jordan claims Meyers has no right to claim the title and that Meyers has evaded a match with him.

WILLIE JACKSON BEATS JOHNNY DUNDEE

Latter Is Near Knockout for Three Rounds, but Fights Back Gamely All the Way

By Universal Service.

New York, Feb. 26.—Willie Jackson received the judges' decision over Johnny Dundee at Madison Square Garden. The bout went the fifteen rounds and Jackson gave Dundee a terrible trouncing.

In the first three rounds the crowd looked for a knockout, as Jackson swung some hard rights to Dundee's jaw. In those sessions the game little Italian battler looked rather tired.

Dundee Just Fought All the Way

After that trio of rounds, however, Dundee fought back every inch of the ground. He seemed figured he was fighting a losing battle. He just fought.

Jackson tried repeatedly for a knockout, but Dundee was too wary, always stepping out of danger.

Jackson weighed 135¼, while Dundee was three pounds lighter.

Pacific Coast Boxer Off to Good Start

Eddie James, a well known habberdasher of San Francisco, made his debut in the opening bout. He met Billy Murphy of Staten Island in an eight-round go. James was fast and clever and received the judges decision.

Soldier Jim Rice, Twenty-fourth Infantry, Columbus, N. M., welterweight champion on the border, went on with Sailor Jardeen of the Navy. Both were of African ancestry. Announcer Humphrey said the lads would go ten rounds. Soldier said differently, and just after the third had started he dropped to the floor, made funny faces and said he was fouled. Referee Sullivan counted "ten," assisted by the crowd. The soldier climbed out of the ring and headed for Columbus, N. M.

GREB'S FORCING TACTICS WIN BATTLE

Smith Evidently Packed Heavier Punch, but Was Not Willing to Mix

By JACK CONWAY.

Harry Greb continues winning his ring bouts just as nonchalantly as Babe Ruth thumps out home runs in baseball quarrels. Jeff Smith of Bayonne, N. J., an international tourist, and by no extraordinary, was added to the Pittsburgh man's casualty list at the Fanculi A. C.'s show at the Mechanics' Building. More than 3,000 fans were on hand to witness the walloping and other ceremonies which go with every respectable boxing match.

For six rounds Smith gave Greb a mighty interesting argument. Jeff has some work at close quarters and his ability to rip heavy right-hand smashes to his rival's body as he came to close quarters enabled him to score many points. Greb apparently wasn't satisfied with the way things had been going during the early rounds of the battle for he put on a little extra juice during the last four stanzas and landed enough hectic socks to win a flock of perfectly respectable fistic engagements.

If Smith had opened up more and taken a chance of landing with his powerful left and right hand blows, the result might have been different. The Bayonne sawyer is a much better mauler than Greb. But his heavy artillery at times was of about as much use to him as a cheering section is to a combat division going into action.

Smith on Defensive Far Too Much

Smith's defeat might well be charged up to the fact that he broke the aggressiveness that made Stanley Keisel and other gallant fighters famous. It is often policy to fight a defensive battle, but we never know of anybody getting anywhere by handing a free rein to the body. His big trouble was that he was afraid to perform this stunt as often as would have been possible if he had wanted to. Greb can't do much or die stuff that dear old poets like to write about.

Greb is as usual, did a lot of hopping around and freakish boxing. He shifted from southpaw to orthodox in the vicinity of the canvas which would bounce off Smith's jaw or rattle his ears. Another hero's role Pittsburgh Harry would also send his right whizzing through the dead air and connect against Smith's lantern jaw. All of which is a mighty unconfortable way for a fighter to be on the receiving end of said wallops.

Smith Earned Honors in First Round

Now for the cold, hard details. Greb walked around in the first round like a fair college girl at a dansante. He scored with a couple of light wallops which didn't do any damage. Smith landed with a heavy left to the body and two solid rights to the head. Two Smith's round.

Smith kept out ahead of the parade in the second round. His body punches were closer quarters where he scored with damaging smashes to the body was what gave him the honors.

Apparently this procedure didn't suit Greb's style of fighting for he got started in the third session and piled up enough of an advantage to give him the edge in this round. The fourth frame was filled with fireworks and Greb managed to grab honors by the proverbial shade.

Greb Showed Value of Agile Footwork

Once more in the fifth round did the Pittsburgh Mauling Master show that a nimble pair of legs, plus the ability to use them around every angle, are mighty valuable assets for any young man who aspires for fistic honors.

Smith's solid body punching enabled him to forge into the lead in the sixth round. That was his last major effort, however, as Greb had things pretty near all his own way for the rest of the quarrel.

Billy Duffy Wallops Johnny McLarthy

Billy Duffy of Everett won over Johnny McLarthy of Lynn in a hang-up eight-round bout. McCarthy scored a couple of knockdowns and would have finished his opponent had he possessed more ring knowledge. Duffy did a lot of clinching and pulled up a lot of points. It would have been a good bout to have called a draw.

Denny Glynn of Roxbury beated Billy Meyers of the South End after eight rounds of weary battling. Mickey Travers of New Haven beated Eddie Ford of East Boston in eight sessions.

Larry Sweeney was master of ceremonies at the ring. Bob Lee of Lynn and James Fitzgerald were the judges.

Their Favorite Sport—and Why
No. 23

By GEORGE V. BROWN, Manager New Boston Arena.

Hockey is my favorite sport.

The ice game, with two fast, evenly matched teams playing, combines all the thrills that go with any other branch of athletics. It has the speed of the track, the sturdy physical clash of football, the science and cleverness of baseball.

It's a game that isn't in the least too intricate for the spectator; can be understood at the first exhibition. The way some of the best players can dribble a puck through the whole opposing team, the startling speed with which they flash forward a goal, would give an Egyptian mummy a thrill.

Hockey is hard and fast, but as from a game as any where physical contact is necessary. The collision is the result, watch everything that goes on, and players—who are rare, by the way—who try to get rough are quickly detected and banished.

HOW COME

By GILL

The grand old sport world is a great place after all.

If you have any doubts on the subject just consider this latest merger of the powers that be in the wrestling game.

George V. Tuohey, the man who took the rest out of wrestling and fog Dave, his most hated rival, have blazed and made up and from now on they will be seen on the gig side of the mat shoes in and around the ears of the wonder.

Just a few short weeks ago George V. had a blue little padded cell all prepared for his present role partner but Dave was sneaky and slipped a sour shoestring today to keep an agent of the law from getting away from Tuohey's Winter quarters at Winthrop.

It will certainly be worth the price of admission to see those two doing the little brother act at their first combined appearance next week.

URBAN STARS IN B. C. VICTORY OVER MAINE

Maroon and Gold Quintet on Right End of 36 to 27 Basketball Score

The Boston College basketball team conquered the University of Maine quintet by a 36 to 27 score, making their comeback as per schedule.

Luke Urban, coach of the B. C. five, took the crowd by storm when he stepped into the game in the second half. He starred goal for the B. C. hoopers' team against the Tech sextet in the hockey game and repeated the performance. Urban's debut came as much as the hockey game was over.

Urban Gets Into Game in Second Half

The B. C. all-around star certainly takes the cake for athletic activity. Besides playing in the hockey game on record of a performance playing on two teams the same evening.

Urban took charge from on coming into the game and getting a team of free throws. Maine was without four regulars against whom they had defeated earlier in the season, and could always be counted on to score in this trim.

Turner and Holmes, center and right forward of the invading host, were the only members of the Maine team, each scoring on a quartet of shots from the floor.

Durfee High Wins From B. C. High

Durfee High of Fall River handed the B. C. High quintet their first setback of the season when they defeated the ring-and-two battle that furnished thrills aplenty.

Durfee's team plod and a strong defense turned the scales in favor of the Fall River lads by the narrowest of margins, the score standing 26 to 24.

Again with six baskets and fouls with a like number of free tries were the stars for the winners, while Captain Ryan and Cahill starred for the losers. Both played a clean and five free shots earned for the locals.

B. U. SWIMMERS TO MEET DARTMOUTH

The Boston University swimming team will meet the Dartmouth natators at Hanover next Saturday. The following men will represent B. U.: Captain Ryan, Cahill, Sullivan, Perry, Brown, Donnell, Richardson, Howard dash, B. Richardson, Perry; breast stroke, Cahill, Sullivan; plunge, Howard dash, B. and E. Richardson, S. Washburn; diving, Riehl, P. Richardson.

This is the first year that Dartmouth has had a swimming team, but they have been working hard and expect to do it. The B. U. team expects to defend the title it won in the Cambridge Y. M. C. A. pool and will play swim against M. I. T. in the latter part of March.

CORNELL WINS ROUGH BASKETBALL BATTLE

New York, Feb. 26.—Cornell administered a 28 to 17 defeat to Columbia in basketball here. It was advertised as basketball, but developed into something of a fracas. It was the first time Columbia had been defeated under this season. Time out was called four occasions to allow the players to cool off. Columbia was in the lead at the end of the first half, 10 to 8, and although Columbia tried very hard in the second, the lads from Ithaca never surrendered the lead.

At length she hard a slow heavy step; leaned back, irresolute; bent forward again and made a pretense of adjusting her typewriter, looked sideling at the door.

The fifty person of Abel Timothy appeared, and paused there, hat pushed back off his wide forehead, unlighted cigar in mouth.

He removed the cigar, raised his eyebrows; looked as if he might, under very slight pressure, come in.

She shook her head; and with her lips framed the words:

"Not now. Later."

He lingered.

She glanced toward Mr. Upham; then moved swiftly to the door and said, low:

"I'll try to be at Phillipps's about five."

"Of course," he said, "if you really want things to go on like this. I guess I can be as good a sport as the next fellow. . . ."

"Not here!" she murmured. "Keep your head, Abe!" And returned to her work.

In a corner alcove at Phillipps's they had a drink.

"Now, look here, Margy," said he. "I've been willing enough—"

"I'm not particularly strong for that 'Now look here,'" said she.

"I can't figure it out, Marge. There's a difference. You're hostile."

"No, I'm not hostile, Abe." She was fingering her glass, thinking hard. She had a delicate course to steer. She knew that any single superfluous word might start endless complications. It was a rule of her life never to tell an unnecessary lie. This was the sort of situation, she decided, to which you told the necessary lie as directly as possible and let it go at that.

"Yes, that's it. You're hostile."

"Listen, Abe! You're looking at me wrong, all wrong. I'm not your property. I never was. I'm a hard-working girl. I'm changeable. I have moods. . . ."

"Moods!" This was a bitter exclamation. He was chewing and chewing his cigar.

"Yes, moods. There are times—you ought to know that, Abe—when I have to be left alone. This is one of those times. I must—I will—be let alone. I—I'm fond of you, but . . ."

"But!"

"Yes, but. Now Abe, another thing. It oughtn't to be difficult, but it is a little difficult, partly because I know just the train of thought it is going to start in your mind, and you'll be wrong—Abe, I've lost my key."

"Oh!" he muttered, after a long silence—"that."

"No, not that! I'm perfectly simple, natural. If you can bring yourself to think sanely for just one minute, you'll see how simple it is. A coincidence, yes. I do want to be alone. I must—I must for a while. Tired even of you, Abe. If you want me to be kind of you you'll accept that and wait me out. I can't help how I feel. And now, at this same time, I've lost my key. I've got to tell you, no matter how elaborate and unpleasant stories you work up in your own mind. Because I haven't any key. I've got to have it done. I can't get in tonight. I simply haven't got it."

For a long time he stared at the threadbare table-cloth, rolling the cigar end and around in the corner of his mouth, and chewing it, muttered again:

"I guess you'll get in all right."

"Now, Abe, you are making it hard for me even to be fond of you."

He looked at her, smiled unpleasantly, drew out his key-ring and furtively glancing about to see if a waiter was near, detached a key and tossed it to her.

She quickly put it in her bag.

"Abe," she said, "I've simply got to believe that you'll laugh, yourself, at this ugly mood of yours when you've had an hour to think it over. I can't, even to protect your feelings, stay locked out of my own rooms."

But all he said, and this was just before they parted, out on the main street, was:

"I guess I can let you alone, all right."

A week later, at the end of an afternoon, Margie came breezily into her apartment, called a cheerful greeting, dropped her coat and hat on the living room table, tidied her hair, and then went into the bedroom, curling up comfortably at the foot of the bed, and surveyed her patient, who was propped up on pillows there and busy at the other end of the bed, with an approving bob of her pretty head.

He put down his book and smiled, wanly.

"It's a pretty good job," said she, thoughtfully. "Nobody ever shaved pneumonia quite so close and escaped. Where's Miss Blaine?"

She said this brightly, naturally, but then, touched unexpectedly by self-consciousness, drooped her eyes.

He colored, and fingered in some confusion the pages of the book. After a moment, he cleared his throat and replied:

"She went upstairs to pack her things."

They fell silent. Then she with evident effort, began chattering about this and that at the office. But the effort was not wholly successful. She went into the living-room to find a cigarette.

The nurse came in.

Calversly heard them talking, very low.

Then the nurse stepped into the bedroom, said good-by, and with a glance of not altogether controllable curiosity from her patient to the feminine things about the room, and from these to the smartly pretty young woman who leaned in the doorway smoking a cigarette, picked up her suit case and left.

Calversly looked out the window for what seemed to him an embarrassingly long time.

"I'll move upstairs," said he.

"You'll do no such thing."

"But——"

"I'm only asking you to be sensible. You're weaker than you think. Take a day or two to get up gradually. Tomorrow, if you feel still better, you can dress. Try moving around a little. But I won't hear of you're moving today."

"But you're——"

"I'm perfectly comfortable up there."

"There's another thing. . . . Miss Blaine . . . about paying her."

"I attended to that."

"But——"

"I'm keeping track. Now listen, please! You're strapped, aren't you? . . . Well, I'm not—not completely—and what little I can do you're more than welcome to. It's the way we do. Good heavens! do you're suppose I haven't borrowed? Well, I have! I'm going to let you pay it back, when you get in earning again. Now please behave."

"How much was it?"

"At the proper time, Hugh, you shall have an itemized statement. . . . Do you know, this chance to study you, especially the days when you hardly knew what you were saying, has been worth a lot to me."

She smiled, knocked the ash off her cigarette with a reflective little finger.

"You strike me as an extraordinarily interesting person. You're very gifted. Very. You've got no end of feeling. I can imagine you as coming through with something like power. You've got fancy, too. Delicacy. I love the way your mind works, about some things. And then, all at once, you get Victorian. As about this money. . . . By the way, I brought in fruit and things, and I'll make tea. We'll have a nice little supper, by ourselves. And I'll come in in the morning and get your breakfast. We'll have great fun. Quit a little honeymoon."

She caught the way his eyes opened and shut, a little difficult, on something outside the window. That was enough of that strain.

She started humming; got some of her things out of the closet.

"I'll just run upstairs with these," she said briskly. "Then I'll come back and fix the supper. I got some groceries. They're fine now."

"It—it's costing a lot," said he, miserably.

"Please, Hugh!

"I think maybe I can get back to the office tomorrow, Margie."

"Hardly."

IT was curious that his imagination would not rise, now, to a realization of that intercourse on which, at times, his fancy had dwelt with such vividness. The very interest, the eagerness with which she took part in their discussions, seemed to him in the nature of an emphatic repudiation of any ties to him which might have been binding.

All this was only, on Hodder's part, to be aware of the startling discovery as to how strong his sense of possession had been, and how irrational, how unwarranted. For he had believed himself, as regarding her, to have made the supreme renunciation of his life. And every look that he had not seen, every word that he had not heard, lingered and her attitude made that renunciation no less difficult. All efforts, all attempt at achievement of the only woman for whom he had ever felt the submissive harmony of desire—the harmony of the mind and the flesh—was cut off.

To be here, facing her again in such close proximity, was at once a pleasure and a torture. And gradually he found himself yielding to the pleasure, to the illusion of permanency created by her presence. And, when all was said, he had as much to be grateful for as he could reasonably have wished, yes, and more. The bond (there was a bond, after all) which united them was unbreakable. They had forged it together. The future would take care of itself.

The range of the conversation upon which they at length embarked was a tacit acknowledgment of a relationship which now united four persons who, six months before, would have believed themselves to have had nothing in common. And it was characteristic of the new interest that it transcended the limits of the parish of St. John's, touched upon the greater affairs to which that parish—if their pretest prevailed—would now be dedicated. No: that the church was at once mentioned, but subtly implied as now enlisted—and emancipated henceforth from all ecclesiastical narrowness. . . . The amazing thing by which Hodder was suddenly struck was the naturalness with which Alison seemed to fit into the new scheme. It was as though she intended to remain there, and had abandoned all intention of returning to the life which apparently she had once permanently and definitely chosen.

Bedloe Hubbell's campaign was another topic. And Phil had observed, with the earnestness which marked his more serious statements, that it wouldn't surprise him if young Carter, Hubbell's candidate for Mayor, overturned that autumn the Beatty machine.

"Oh, do you think so?" Alison exclaimed with exhilaration.

"They're frightened and out of breath," said Phil, "they had no idea that Bedloe would stick after they had licked him in three campaigns. Two years ago they tried to buy him off by offering to send him to the Senate, and Wallis Plimpton has never got through his head to this day why he refused.

Mr. Plimpton's head, Eleanor declared dryly, was impervious to a certain kind of idea.

"I wonder if you know, Mr. Hodder, what an admirer Mr. Huddell is of yours?" Alison asked. "He is most anxious to have a talk with you."

Hodder did not know.

"Well," said Phil, enthusiastically, to the rector, "that's the best tribute you've had yet. I can't say that Bedloe was a more unregenerate heathen than I was but he was pretty bad."

Talk led them all save Hodder into comments on the character of the congregation the Sunday before, in the midst of which the rector was called away to the telephone. Sally Grover had promised to let him know whether or not they had found Kate Marcy, and his face was grave when he returned. . . . He was still preoccupied, an hour later, when Alison arose to go.

"But your carriage isn't here," said Phil, going to the window.

"Oh, I preferred to walk," she told him. "It isn't far."

III

A blood-red October moon shed the fulness of its light on the silent houses, and the trees still clinging to leaf, cast black shadows across the lawns and deserted streets. The very odors of their footsteps on the pavement seemed to enhance the quality of their surroundings. Some of the residences were already closed for the night, although the hour was not late, and the glow behind the blinds of the others was nullified by the radiancy from above. To Hodder, the sense of their seclusion had never been more complete.

Alison, while repudiating the notion that an escort were needed in a neighborhood of such propriety and peace, had not refused his offer to accompany her. And Hodder felt instinctively, as he took his place beside her, a sense of climax. This situation, like those of the past, was not of his own making. It was here, confronting him, and a certain inevitable intoxication at being once more alone with her prevented him from forming any policy with which to deal with it. He might either trust himself to her or he might not. And as she said, the distance was not great. But, he could not help wondering, during those first moments of silence, whether she comprehended the strength of the temptation to which she subjected him. . . .

The night was warm. She wore a coat, which was open and from time to time he caught the gleam of the moonlight on the knotted pearls at her throat. Over her head she had flung a mantilla-like, a black lace scarf, the effect of which was, in the soft luminosity encircling her, to add to the quality of mystery never exhausted. If by acquiescing in his company she had yielded to a tie between them, the lace shawl falling over the coils of her dark hair and framing in its folds her face, had somehow made her once more a stranger. Nor was it until she presently looked up into his face with a smile that this impression was, if not at once wholly dissipated, at least contradicted.

Her question, indeed, was intimate.

"Why did you come with me?"

"Why?" he repeated, taken aback.

"Yes. I'm sure you have something you wish to do, something which particularly worries you."

"No," he answered, speaking [illegible]

[illegible] I could see [illegible] woman to whom Mr. Bentley is interested, in whom I am interested, has disappeared. But we have taken all the steps possible towards finding her."

"It was nothing—more serious, then? That, of course, is serious enough. Nothing, I mean, directly affecting your prospects of remaining—where you are?"

"No," he answered. He rejoiced fiercely that she should have asked him. The question was not bold, but a natural resumption of the old footing. "Not that I mean to imply," he added, returning her smile, "that those 'prospects' are in any way improved."

"Are they any worse?" she said.

"I see the bishop tomorrow. I have no idea what position he will take. But even if he should decide not to recommend me for trial many difficult problems still remain to be solved."

"I know. It's fine," she continued, after a moment, "the way you are going ahead as if there were no question of your not remaining, and getting all those people into the church and subscribing them as you did when they had come for all sorts of reasons. Do you remember, the first time I met you, I told you I could not think of you as a clergyman. I cannot now—less than ever."

"What do you think of me as?" he asked.

When a Girl Marries

AN UNUSUAL STORY OF EARLY WEDDED LIFE

By Ann Lisle

Whose Present Serial Has Won a Big Popular Success.

Copyright, 1921, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

WHO is Miss Storrs? Why has Jim left his office in charge of a woman of whom I've never even heard? And why did this woman send my brother off on trails which, to quote him, "seemed to lead nowhere"?

With these questions puzzling me I sat playing with the food I'd prepared—food which I was compelled to consider palatable since Neal ate with gusto, relating his adventures between courses.

"I could not find him," she cried. "Oh, Mrs. Harrison, what am I to do? I can't find Lloyd anywhere. I trust him. Never for I don't, but something's happened to him. I know it. If it hadn't I'd have heard. And without me—he might do anything foolish."

"Nothing's happened, Bertha. Rest assured," I began.

But she went on with a hopeless note in her voice.

"And when I do find him—what then? How's he going to get another job? Who's going to trust him like you did?"

"Who?" I began vaguely. Then the inspiration came to me and I went with complete assurance. "Who but Mrs. Dalton! Loyns often helped you about the house. I'm sure they'd take him on as gardener or extra man until they get a car, which they're sure to do soon."

At once she began to clear the table, and in the accustomed work I could see that she was finding a certain peace and calmness.

When the telephone rang a minute or two later I answered it myself. Over the wire came a strange voice—gruff, alarming, curt.

"Is this Mrs. James Hunter Harrison?" he asked.

The Adventures of Ann

By Hal Coffman

CHAPTER LXXX.

ANN hurried to her room in one beautiful home of this town with the beard. The note that she had finally managed to get without raising the suspicions of the ever watchful maid was carefully tucked inside her dress. The maid locked her in her room, and as there were bars at the windows she knew that was the end of her visiting beard and one of the wealthiest men in Brazil.

Ann did not know of Harwood's big yacht speeding under forced draft for Rio, or that Frank Langdon had been a very interested spectator as she passed the clever vessel upon which he was a passenger. Ann carefully wrapped the bandkerchief around a little ornament that was on the mantel. It was small and heavy and Ann thought it would do. So through the barred window to the space where the note had been left for her. It wasn't far from her window. She put the bundle into the shrubbery with a prayer that it would be found when she heard the key being turned in the lock of her door.

The Girl and Ambition

WHEN SHE FEELS THE CALL TO DO BIG THINGS

By Dr. Wm. A. McKeever

Professor of the University of Kansas and an Authority on Child Training

[illegible] ward the goal of her ambition. However, the chances are that she will never catch up with it; she will simply find a better and un-

[illegible] wasted talents of servants in the career of a promising young girl—her longing, her disappointment, her despondency, her temporary giving up. And then I have seen her spirit awaken anew and her ambition arise to a great height, with the final conclusion of it all as—what? Some happy association or joyous achievement which she did not exactly seek or really expect. Such, indeed, is the great invigorating highway over which, I believe, every worthy young person must travel to the goal of her own triumph and self revelation.

It is Heaven's eternal highway, blazed through the wilderness of early doubt and despair and held to only by the trusting, courageous soul.

The New Threat

"No, sir!" stormed the purse-proud parent. "I will never, never consent to your marrying my daughter."

"But, sir——"

"Tears, idle tears," he "Quis" thundered the irate father. "I have spoken."

A look of defiance lighted up the young man's somewhat crestfallen countenance.

"Very good, sir," he said "if you will not agree, then I must enforce my demand. I am considered a hard-working, good-looking young fellow, and I'll get you turn down my application."

"I do," said the rich man.

"Then, sir, I will go away and make love to your cook, proposed to her—if a week we will elope——"

The rich man turned purple, then paled. "Young man," he gasped in tremulous accents. "Such conduct is inhuman. My cook is a jewel. I would not part with her for millions. You can have my daughter, but my cook—never!"

NEW PRESIDENT'S PERSONAL ESCORT—The Third Squadron of the Third Regular Cavalry has been detailed as the personal escort of President Harding during the inaugural ceremonies. The squadron, which is stationed at Fort Meyer, Va., will be under the command of Col. William C. Rivers. It is one of the army's crack cavalry units. (Keystone)

CROWDED QUARTERS—This band of Chinese refugees are all crowded into the one little hut where they try to live out the famine. They escaped from isolated parts of the hinterland before troops were sent out to cut off the exodus. (U. & U.)

A TWIG OF THE OLD TREE—Miss Viola Tree, daughter of the famous English actor, Beerbohm Tree, was one of the low scorers in a recent golf tourney for stage folk. Also winning fame on the boards. (Central)

AMERICAN JOCKEY TO RIDE FOR ROYALTY—Johnny Carmody, one of consistent winners in American turf events for the past few years, will probably ride the King of England's horses this season. Johnny is considering a very flattering offer. He is shown mounted on Doctor D. at the Havana track, where he pulled down more than his share of purses. (Central)

CAT SCRATCH NEW BEAUTY MARK—A French actress was badly clawed by her pet kitty. Dolled up scars as beauty spots and made a hit. Rose Stone adopted the practice. (Int.)

RIGHT DOWN THE MIDDLE—Long Jim Barnes clicking one off the beautiful tenth tee at Palm Beach. The cocoanut palms that encroach on the fairways don't bother those pros at all. That's why they're pros. This was snapped during the big open tournament, won by Pat O'Hare. Jesse Guilford of Woodland led all the amateurs and finished fifth. (Int.)

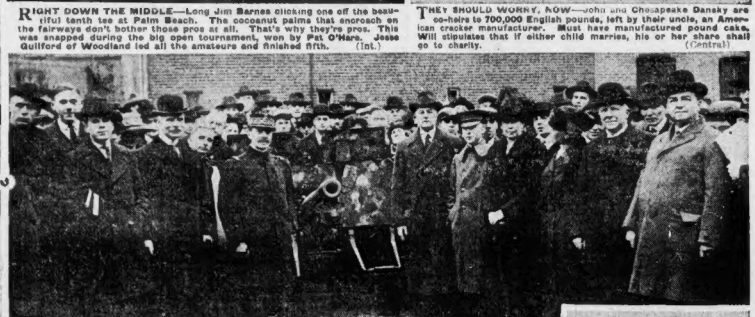
THEY SHOULD WORRY, NOW—John and Chesapeake Danaky are co-heirs to 700,000 English pounds, left by their uncle, an American cracker manufacturer. Must have manufactured pound cake. Will stipulates that if either child marries, his or her share shall go to charity. (Central)

QUEER IDEAS OF FUN—The Polar Bears, a mid-winter outing club, had their reunion at Coney Island recently. Lots of bears there—bare feet, bare knees, etc. The only one who didn't have a lot of fun was the camera man, who nearly froze, waiting around to get his pictures. But he got 'em. He always does. (U. & U.)



PRESENT CANNON TO UNIVERSITY — General Collardet, French military attache, presents a captured German gun to George Washington University on its 100th anniversary. (Int.)

BET THIS BIRD NEVER WANTS A DAY OFF—A. I. Derbart is the chemist in the Prohibition Enforcement Office, Chicago, and he tests all the liquor confiscated. He's testing some in the picture, though there are quicker and more pleasant ways of doing it, we have heard. One help wanted adv. for this job would start another war. (Int.)

A CHARMING SENORITA—The dark beauty of Marion Davies, movie star, is peculiarly adapted to Spanish costumes. Her flashing black eyes complete the character. (Keystone.)

SWINGING OVER THE DANCING BILLOWS—Is the latest sport at Palm Beach. Miss Nellie White of New York evidently enjoys it. (U. & U.)

FRENCH ACE DECORATES HERO'S GRAVE — Charles Nungesser, famous flying captain of France, pays tribute to his fellow countryman, General Etienne M. Bechet. The latter, a French noble, was adjutant-general of the French forces with Washington at Georgetown in 1782. The grave is located in the yard of St. Paul's church, the house of worship which Washington attended. In the group, from left to right, are Col. Telanor Guyler, Captain Nungesser, the Marquis de Charette, T. Mathieu, the Rev. Joseph Patton McConas and Miss Consuela Bates. General Bechet died in New York in 1814. (Wide World)

LATEST IN MEN'S WEAR—Workers in Ireland are wearing a chest protector of thin steel, with chain obstacles. This is for protection from bullets, stray or otherwise. (Wide World.)

Issues Gain From a Fraction to Three Points

MARKET CLOSES STRONG AND ACTIVE

Decline in Call Money Rate to 6 Per Cent. Betters Sentiment

By BROADAN WALL.
Registered U. S. Patent Office.

New York, Feb. 26.—Week-end covering of short committments imparted strength to the stock market yesterday. A decline in the call money rate to 6 per cent. also contributed to the improvement, as did a denial that the United States Steel Corporation proposed cutting prices at this time.

Gains in the general list ranged from a fraction to nearly three points, the larger betterments being established by specialties. The close was strong and around the best prices for the session.

Professional traders continued to take "pot shots" at certain stocks in which there exists a thin market and in those that are endeavoring to do some new financing. This "sharpshooting" is causing many people to refrain from making new commitments, inasmuch as the "lame ducks" shot at are usually those not expected to be attacked.

Appointment of receivers for the Atlanta, Birmingham & Atlantic had been expected by railroad executives, although it took the financial district by surprise. The receivership is accepted as a move in the fight being waged by the transportation companies to reduce wages.

The announcement came about ten minutes before the close of the market and had insufficient time to register its effect on the railroad list. The stock quickly declined two points following the appointment of the receivers and closed at the bottom figure.

The quiet accumulation which has been going on for months in Kansas City Southern common came to the surface when that issue assumed a prominent position in the railroad group by advancing about a point.

Heavy offerings of Vanadium Steel in the late afternoon attracted much attention. The price declined 3½ points in as maany minutes on selling by a firm which has in recent months been very prominent on the bear side of the market. Stromberg Carburetor and Replogle Steel, other so-called Ryan shares, were also under pressure. Replogle lost nearly 4 points and Stromberg 5.

The bond market continued soft, especially in the railroad department.

JANUARY DECREASE IN FOREIGN TRADE

January decreases in foreign trade are reported by the Department of Commerce, both exports and imports falling off. For the month merchandise imports totaled $209,000,000, against $266,000,000 in December and $474,000,000 in January last year. The import total, in fact, is the smallest for any month since February, 1918.

Imports for seven months ended January, 1921, were $2,543,000,000, against $2,768,000,000 in the like 1920 period. January exports were $655,000,000, against $721,000,000 in December and $722,000,000 in January, 1920. Exports in seven months ended by January this year came to $4,638,000,000, against $4,585,000,000.

The excess of exports over imports in January this year was $448,000,000, against $248,000,000 in January, 1920, and with exception of December, 1920, is the largest monthly excess of exports since June, 1919.

PRICE TREND IS MIXED IN BOSTON

Local Market Dull and Narrow: Curb Opens Weak, but Improves

Stocks were irregular on the Boston exchange yesterday and did not develop strength with New York, although there was a better tone in the afternoon. It was as dull and narrow a market as has been known this year. Fluctuations averaged small, but gains were more substantial on the whole than losses. Trading had no interesting incident. Ventura was more active than it has been for a long time, transactions in this issue aggregating almost 2,500 shares. After it came Carson Hill and Trinity. All three closed with fractional gains. Ventura's activity is said to have been due to talk to the effect that it may pay a higher dividend before long.

N. E. TELEPHONE STRONG.

New England Telephone attained a new 1921 high when it sold at 104. It closed with a point gain. Copper Range was up 1½ at the finish and Mohawk ¼, but coppers, as a class, were neglected. Not much attention was given packing issues. They showed neither life nor any price variation to speak of. Rails were ignored. United Fruit was strong, advancing two points. Issues to recede a point were Old Dominion, Agricultural Chemical preferred and General Electric, while Calumet & Arizona, United Shoe and Mexican Investment sustained smaller losses. Massachusetts Gas was off a point at one time but closed with a gain of ¾.

CURB LIST IMPROVED.

The curb market had a weak start and was heavy during the morning. It improved in the afternoon and closed irregular. Trading was of reduced volume and the most active issues were Manhattan and Texana, both of which finished unchanged, and Boston & Montana. Gains and losses ruled small.

Among advances were Gadsden 10 cents, Mutual 1 cent, Randolph 7 cents, Seven Metals 1 cent, Majestic 6 cents and Champion 8 cents.

Declines included Boston & Montana 1 cent, Sierra Silver 3 cents, Eureka 3 cents, Bohemia 15 cents, Hecla Divide 3 cents and Henrietta ⅛.

BOSTON FINANCIAL NOTES

During the February 12 week New England railroads handled 32,946 cars loaded with revenue freight in the period compared with 32,000 in the corresponding week last year. Of this total 12,276 cars were on the New York, New Haven & Hartford, compared with 7,676 cars a year ago.

January gross sales by the Waldorf System, Inc., amounted to $888,152, a high record for a month and an expansion of 21 per cent., as compared with the first 1920 month. Net profits after taxes, depreciation and charges totalled $85,368 against $72,869.

The Jones, McDuffee & Stratton Company meals at an average price per meal of 28.4 cents and net profits of only 2.5 cents.

New River Company's coal production for the first week of February was but 30,000 tons and the output of the month will probably be less than 115,000 tons.

The Beacon Oil Company in which Massachusetts Gas owns a 42 per cent. stock interest, has declared a dividend of 8 per cent., payable February 28 on stock of record February 26.

The George E. Warren Company of Boston has been incorporated in Massachusetts with a capital of $800,000.

The Revere Sugar Refinery, owned by the United Fruit Company, has re-entered the market and is quoting refined sugar at 7.75 cents, less 2 per cent.

The Jones, McDuffee & Stratton Company has declared its usual quarterly dividends of 2 per cent. on the preferred stock and 2½ per cent. on the class A stock, both payable March 1 to holders of record February 25.

Waldorf System, Inc., has declared a regular quarterly dividend of 25 cents on common, 20 cents on the preferred and 20 cents on the first preferred stocks, all payable April 1 to stock of record March 18.

BANKER SUGGESTS PLAN TO PROMOTE BUILDING

President George S. Mumford of the Commonwealth Trust Company suggests a plan for the alleviation of the dwelling house situation through establishment of a big co-operative bank under direct management of ten bank executives, the preferred stock of which could be subscribed for by leading business houses. "The main fact at the bottom of the building and housing problem is that the public at the present time, at least, prefers to invest its money in other things," says Mr. Mumford. "Before the days of large Federal income taxes and Liberty bonds there was always a fairly active demand for first-class mortgage loans at 4 per cent. interest per year, and 6 per cent. was considered a high rate for even second mortgages on country property.

"Now, however, the income from mortgages is subject to Federal taxation and there is a practically unlimited supply of Liberty bonds for investment by institutions, and Liberty bonds are certainly as secure and almost as attractive, as far as income is concerned, as the average mortgage, and are, moreover, free from possible annoyances of foreclosure and other cares that mortgages involve. The result is that mortgages are not as much sought after by institutions and the investing public as formerly."

Cotton Markets

New York, Feb. 26.—Cotton dropped to its lowest price, 1915, yesterday, when it sold at 11.72. All months touched new lows for the season at the opening under heavy selling by Southern wire houses. The early decline was helped by lower stock market prices, the fall of silver in London and reports of a demoralized Manchester market. Heavy selling broke the whole list late in the day. The close was steady at a net decline of 37 to 45 points. Prices were:

Scuttling Prosperity Ship With Broken Contracts

Roger Babson, statistician for American bankers, merchants and investors, says the need of the hour in the business world is a revival of integrity.

Mr. Babson said more than this in a recent lay sermon to banqueters at Chicago's Association of Commerce. He claimed that a wave of business immorality threatens to undermine the cornerstones of all business—character and credit.

His special reference, of course, was to the cancellation of buying orders. Most bankers and merchants are aware that an epidemic of these cancellations threatened disaster until a few strong leaders in the business world called a halt. Even yet the force of the epidemic is not wholly spent.

There is no difference in moral integrity, or the lack of it, whether two contracting parties are individuals, firms, incorporated companies or municipalities. The contract is supposed to represent the integrity of both contracting parties.

Contract breaking is not only the most dangerous and unsettling hindrance to a revival of normal business prosperity, but reacts with terrific force on those who break their pledged word in business. Europe is in chaos today because national and individual integrity has been destroyed in the stress of war and its aftermath.

Mr. Babson is right in telling America's business leaders that this, of all countries, cannot afford to cut loose from the moorings that are the foundation of credit and the talisman of prosperity.

Boston City Council Acts on Lighting Co. Grab

Councillor Watson and the City Council acted wisely and promptly in condemning the proposed capitalization of premiums by lighting companies of the State. It would be well if the other cities and towns followed the example set by the Boston City Council.

We have not the least fear that the bill providing for the capitalization of premiums will become a law, for whatever action the Legislature may take in that direction will be vetoed by the people on a referendum and not by any hocus-pocus and desperate old-fashioned methods of the lobby. If the lighting combination in this State succeeds in controlling two-thirds of both houses so completely that it is able to carry a declaration that this appeal is an emergency, then it will be repealed by an initiative petition. Neither the capitalization of surplus nor of premiums will be tolerated by the intelligent people of Massachusetts.

Hunting Out "Revolutions" the Latest Sport

Paris dispatches tell of the arrest of two Socialist members of the Chamber of Deputies, and of the discovery by the secret police of a great plot to inaugurate a Red revolution on May 1. The secret police have also discovered that the Reds are being financed from America and Germany—with Russian gold. All France is thankful that the efficient secret police have thus saved the nation from Red revolt, etc., etc.

Persons who have good memories will be struck with the resemblance of the noble and heroic activities and discoveries of the French secret police to the likewise noble and heroic activities and discoveries of our own secret police a year ago. At that time Mr. Palmer's noble and heroic secret police, it will be remembered, discovered that there was a nation-wide plot to begin a terrible Red revolution on May 1. The fact that the Democratic convention was to meet a few weeks later to nominate a candidate for the presidency and that attention might possibly be called to Mr. Palmer's modest ambition to be the candidate, did not have anything to do, of course, with the revelation of the desperate and awful plot of the millions of Reds whose carefully concealed preparations Mr. Palmer's vigilant and trustworthy secret police frustrated under the able and always heroic leadership of Mr. Palmer.

To be sure, May came and went without even the explosion of a firecracker, and all the tremendous villains arrested by Mr. Palmer's noble and heroic commands had to be discharged through lack of evidence of any evil designs or conduct. But undoubtedly the nation had been saved, and the hellish designs and plots of the Red conspirators in Moscow and Berlin had been wonderfully brought to naught.

Remembering Mr. Palmer and his very remarkable May revolution, we feel quite certain that the equally dangerous Red revolution which has been discovered and frustrated by the present French administration, and the admirable sagacity and wonderful heroism of the French secret police will become as celebrated in history as our own dreadful danger and miraculous escape on May 1, 1920.

Blind Ben Welch Is Better, Brighter Than Ever

When Ben Welch, veteran comedian, was stricken permanently blind before the footlights his longtime friend of burlesque days, one-eyed Frank Murphy, abandoned his job and rushed to join his afflicted pal. The devotion shown by this typical Celt to a simon-pure Jew on and off the boards were seen first hand by a Boston Sunday Advertiser reporter, who interviewed Ben behind the scenes. "I'm not totally disabled; I'm totally Ben Welch," asserted the comedian, who tore up his $10,000 insurance policy to continue convulsing thousands. Ben sees with his soul somehow, and today he is a better and brighter comedian than ever.

The marvellous cure of a little girl who was talking herself to death, and for nine days and nights baffled the most eminent specialists is described by a Boston chiropractor. It is only just what ailed the child, why other medical and surgical men failed to find the trouble, and how the nerves controlling speech were restored to normal within a few hours.

Has a person's "astral form" the power to leave the physical body during a trance, passing through walls and even glass? This is the explanation by occultists of the amazing powers actually shown by a frail girl in the nationally famous "flowerbed burial" mystery. She declares she talks with her departed grandmother, who, she insists, is not dead but constantly with her.

If you were a spiritualist and failed to convert your best friend, and committed suicide to send messages from the other side, do you think you'd repent in heaven? That's just what Professor Bradford did, according to the revelations he is said to have made to the woman skeptic who prompted his tragic deed. "I am penitent for my last mistake on earth," he said, only thankful that the purpose for which he ended his life had been fulfilled.

Audrey Munson, whose revelations of life in the studios of New York's greatest artists have caused a tremendous sensation, tells tomorrow how a simple maiden of sixteen, who never before had posed in the nude, gave a noted painter his inspiration for the wonderful statue, "The Spirit of Louvain," which King Albert of Belgium purchased while he was in America.

Miss Munson also recites the triumphs and tragic fate of Maria de Socci, once the darling of Paris and today—a scrubwoman. Be sure to read this remarkable feature in the Magazine Section.

Should the hopelessly insane be put to death?

Would it be better for the hundreds of maniacs and others dragging out lives of misery in New England asylums to be mercifully put out of their pain? The lawmakers of Connecticut are seriously contemplating this question, following an inspection of the State Hospital at Norwich, and they raise a problem for the legislatures of Massachusetts and other States. The Magazine Section of the Boston Sunday Advertiser devotes two pages to this deep subject, with photographs depicting the terrible conditions found in insane retreats.

"If I Were Harding"—by William Jennings Bryan.

On the eve of the inauguration the Commoner presents a momentous article on what the plain people of the entire country will require of the new President and his administration. Mr. Bryan declares the problems awaiting Harding are more difficult than those encountered by any previous Chief Executive. First and foremost, he asserts, the world awaits his word on international relations. The former Secretary of State points out the tremendous opportunity ahead of Harding, especially because his nomination came in such a manner as to leave him entirely free to follow his own conscience in interpreting his obligations to the country.

Bryan is at his best in this prophetic article, which will appear exclusively in the Boston Sunday Advertiser.

"Cork was burned by British officers—the public has been fed on faked reports"—these declarations are made by Alfred G. Gardiner, celebrated English editor, in a remarkably strong article on the Strickland report of the burning of the business district of Cork, which official paper has been suppressed by the British government. Mr. Gardiner's views on the matter will be printed in the next Boston Sunday Advertiser.

Declaring that England is spending millions annually to corrupt Americanism, a prominent member of the Somerville School Board calls on the American Legion and the G. A. R. to demand an investigation of the history text-books used in the schools of that city. Already the committee has been split wide open by a book written by a woman teacher, which those protesting assert is deliberate propaganda for England —almost ignoring the existence of America as a democracy and as a nation. All Greater Boston and all New England are interested in this subject, for Somerville is only one instance of such propaganda.

What would you say about two sisters so closely attached to each other that they were bound to die together?

This is literally true of the two Czech twins who have just come to Boston to tour America. They are the parallel of the famous Siamese twins who astonished the world. A Boston Sunday Advertiser woman reporter interviewed the twins and says how they were forced to do everything together practically in unison. She discovered these cheerful women had one terrible obsession. When one of them dies, of any cause, the twin must perish within a few hours at the most!

Here in Boston is a young woman college graduate, comparatively new to the insurance field, who has become manager of a department writing $2,000,000 business a year. She tells girls ambitious to get out of "the rut" how she decided she was receiving too small a return for her labor in another field, and "jumped." Success crowned her efforts from the start. Incidentally, she says Boston is a far better business field in the long run than New York.

All "leading citizens and men about town," as well as our newly-municipalized women, will read with tense interest George Ade's very latest Fable in Slang: "The Veteran Club Girl and the Gentle Art of Man-Taming." There are several morals scattered through this modern tale as well as the one at the finis.

These are but a few hints of the many features in New England's Greatest Sunday Paper. Order TODAY if you would read tomorrow's Boston Sunday Advertiser.

More Truth Than Poetry

Perkinsville or Paris

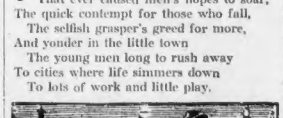
By S. E. KISER

IN yonder little country town
The History of Man is told;
The secret longing for renown,
The favor bought, the honor sold;
The comedies and tragedies
Are acted there, day after day;
Out there, the lover on his knees
Pleads in the old, persuasive way.

THERE pious men address their prayers
To Him who governs all the spheres;
There Fortune favors him who dares,
And scandal fills the gossip's ears;
There all that men desire or dread
Awakens joy or brings unrest;
There angels watch around her bed
Who clasps her first-born to her breast.

THERE, where the quiet streets are wide,
Are doubt and hope, and death and life;
Dark secrets it is well to hide,
Old age and youth, and peace and strife;
The envy that embitters friends,
Grief's blighting scar, Love's glad embrace—
There trust is stabbed, and folly ends
In futile grieving and disgrace.

THERE, in the little town, is all
That ever caused men's hopes to soar;
The quick contempt for those who fall,
The selfish grasper's greed for more,
And yonder in the little town
The young men long to rush away
To cities where life simmers down
To lots of work and little play.



SOME YOUNG MEN ARE SO IDEALISTIC

These Massachusetts young men who have refused to accept an inheritance of a million dollars must be heartily despised by some of the gentlemen who are disposing of the government's war supplies.

To the Editor

Editor Boston American:

Mr. A. Lincoln Filene, in his letter in the American for February 24, declares that if the Smith-Towner bill were really un-American and would result in Federal autonomy the citizens' committee, of which he is chairman, would not support it. It is precisely because this bill is of such a character that our leading educators have united in opposing it. President Lowell and President Emeritus Eliot of Harvard, Presidents Hibben of Princeton and Butler of Columbia, President Emeritus Hadley of Yale, and scores of other equally prominent educators have joined in fighting against the un-American control of education called for in the Smith-Towner bill.

In spite of vague amendments to the contrary, this measure would inevitably result in Federal control. The Secretary of Education would be the supreme authority over the schools of the nation. Before any State could receive financial assistance it must submit for his approval the proposed courses on all subjects covered by the bill. If he withholds his approval, he is in conscience bound to withhold also that State's share in the appropriation. Surely control could hardly be more direct or unqualified.

The remainder of Mr. Filene's letter may be fairly summarized in the declaration that education is a national problem and should be a subject for national legislation. In other words, because illiteracy is unfortunately prevalent in certain Southern States, Massachusetts and other efficient States should assume the burdens of others as well as their own. He leaves it to be assumed that those districts which have neglected their schools could not afford to support them. In fact, his example of the improvement of conditions in Rowan County, Ky., only makes more obvious the fact that even the Southern States are well able to care for the instruction of their children if they so desire. Surely it would be difficult to persuade a student of economics during and since the war that the South is so poor that States like our own should pay its expenses.

Although unintentionally, the advocates of the Smith-Towner bill are really guilty of slandering American education. This blanket charge for radical changes, and could be justified only by the utter failure of our present system. Yet the latest reports of the regional conferences called by the United States Commissioner of Education are most optimistic. They found a general improvement throughout the country in school conditions and in public interest. This has been accomplished through State control. There is no reason why it cannot be continued and increased under State control.

SECOND FIDDLE

There is no such thing as pretty near right when it comes to value.

Get the habit of thinking of things as either right or wrong, no compromise in your mind, and you will progress faster.

The pretty-near-right man is easy with himself.

He is satisfied if he comes within a second of it whether it be in time or quality of work.

But the thing which is right, "all but," may fall short in an essential particular and may become valueless on that account.

Also if you are willing to take second place you will always have to play second to some one person or accomplishment.

Think in terms of first place or nothing—aim high.

To be sure, you must be second in order to get to the top, but if you think second place pretty good you never will have the right sort of feeling to be a top-notcher.

"Nothing is good if anything else is better," is the best motto.

If nothing short of the top satisfies you you will get where you want to go if you have the ability, can concentrate on it and will keep trying.

Eugene Debs

"This is true liberty when freeborn men,
Having to advise the public, may speak free;
Which he who can and will deserves high praise.
What can be juster in a state like this?"
—Euripides, translated by John Milton.

The robes of Justice in her whited hall
Appear like sackcloth to the lucid mind
That looketh forward. She a doubly blind
In making Eugene Debs her captive thrall!

His name is lettered on the dingy wall
By sunbeams through the bars. Light unconfined
Shall form his aureole when he stands enshrined
In Freedom's temple when all Bastiles fall.

The body, like an eagle caged, may droop
Until the pioneer lamp, that dimly shone
Within the dungeon, beckons from the group
Of pilot stars. The soul of Martyr John,
Who hung for leading that forlornest hope
At Harper's Ferry, still went marching on!

Epigrams

MANY a wrinkled brow that passes for deep thinking is but the frown of a grouch.

IT is better to learn how to think in one language than to speak in many.

A LOGICAL CONCLUSION

"Italy is not worth dying for," says d'Annunzio, who has been so well advertised that it is only natural for him to wish to live to cash in on his publicity.

Discourses of a Scientist

By Edgar Lucien Larkin,
Director Mt. Lowe Observatory

THE measures of the lengths of the waves of radiant energy named light are now made with the new type of spectrometers with an accuracy beyond imagination. These lengths vary from 33,000 to the inch for the faintest red, up through all lengths for the various rates constituting colors, to 63,000 in the region of faint violet, that adjacent to the mystic realm of the ultra violet. These are not light in the ordinary sense of the term, since they are invisible, the waves being too short and too rapid to affect the retinal nerves of the eye, but they are made plain by radio—not photography, than are the visible.

An image cast on a negative plate by visible waves is of course a radiograph, since light is radiant energy; but graphs secured by the invisible rays have been specifically named radiographs. The idea of first securing the release of the vast energy stored in atoms, the energy that holds their electrons together in orbits of rapid revolution will not down. When melanite, lyddite and dynamite exploded, the terrific force liberated is that which held molecules together in masses and atoms to form molecules. But the atoms still remain atoms and are not separated into their constituent revolving electrons.

Could atoms be made to surrender their energy of formation gradually, not instantaneously, then it could be used in mechanical work. But this problem seems to be insoluble at present. And if solved, the cost might be proven prohibitive. The height of theory on speculation is that of utilizing cosmic ether. One idea is to condense it; but as it passes through all forms of matter known, it cannot be condensed by enclosures.

A fanciful idea is that of isolating ether in currents flowing in one direction for mechanical use. These are now shadowy problems. But they may have to be solved when every trace of coal and oil vanishes.

Have You Any Songs From Ireland?

Editor Boston American.

Sir: Is it possible that any of your readers have any of the songs they are singing in Ireland today? I am told that the fight for freedom has called forth a number of new songs that are as inspiring as the "Battle Cry of Freedom" or the "Star Spangled Banner" were to the people of this great nation. Can't we see these in print?

M. H. G.

Editor's Note: The Editor and the Boston American would be grateful to any reader who would lend him copies of the words and music of some of these songs. Address EDITOR BOSTON AMERICAN.
